IMMIGRATION.

New Plan for Expediting Immigrants to the West.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, December 5.—A special meeting of the full Board of Immigration Commissioners was held yesterday to confer with representatives of the trunk lines of railroads terminating at New York with regard to co-operating in effecting certain desirable reforms in the conduct of the immigrant business at this port. There were present, besides the Commissioners, Albert Fink, pool commissioner of the trunk lines, and C. B. Meeker, of the New York Central Railroad; John N. Abbott, of the New York, Lake Erie and Western; J. R. Wood of the Pennsylvania, and C. K. Wood, of the Baltimore and Ohio, general passenger agents. After a prolonged conference it was resolved that the business of ticketing immigrants and checking their luggage at this port should be done within Castle Garden, so that it could be under the general supervision of the board; further, that no immigrant passage tickets whatever should be sold or offered for sale at offices outside of Castle Garden. The railroad agents, to render feasible the adoption of this plan asked for suitable space in the garden for the ticket and luggage departments, for which they said they were willing to pay suitable rent. This was granted. It was also proposed that a joint agent of the railroad companies should be appointed, to whom all the employes of the forwarding department should be responsible and who should have immediate supervision of the receiving of immigrants, furnishing them with desired information respecting routes, rates of fare, selling them tickets, trucking, weighing and checking baggage, etc. This was agreed upon. Secretary H. J. Jackson was suggested for the position and was approved. Mr. Jackson will be relieved of a portion of his present clerical work to enable him to perform the duties of joint agent. It was resolved that all transportation companies authorized to transact business in Castle Garden should do so under the supervision of the joint agency and should be required to share pro rata according to the number of immigrants ticketed over each route in the necessary expenses. These expenses are understood to be the rent paid to the commissioners, the salary of the joint agent and his assistants, etc. It was also resolved, on condition that the commission would exercise its authority to prevent non-cooperating transportation companies from selling immigrant tickets and paying commissions thereon at offices outside of Castle Garden, and would also exclude from the privileges in Castle Garden any transportation companies, boarding-house keepers, or other persons who did not respect the rules, that the payment of commissions on immigrant tickets should be entirely stopped.

A circular was sent to the ocean steamship companies and booking agents of the railroads by the trunk line commissioner a week ago, stating that, beginning on January 1 the rate of commissions for tickets should be five per cent and should not exceed in any case $1 a ticket. The commissions have been as high as 25 per cent to the steamship companies and 10 per cent to the runners.

A CURIOUS WILL.

A Member of the Jeannette Crew Disposes of His Effects.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, December 5.—Peter Johnson, a Swede, one of the crew of the Jeannette, who left that vessel in the boat commanded by Lieut. Chipp, which has never since been heard of, and which is supposed to have been lost in the Arctic, lived in Brooklyn, where he had an aunt named Klein. Yesterday morning L. E. Gilbert, counsel for Mrs. Klein, offered for probate in the King's County Surrogate's office the following letter written by Johnson to his aunt, as the autograph will of Johnson:

"Dear Mrs. Klein: I send you theese few lines to lete you know that we had to macke out ower will, so of cors I ned mom to you, for if I could not come backe again you will geve woth is leit after me. But I hope I live to return home onse more. I tol them thot you were my aunte so if Mr. Bennett could writ to you. So tell him who I ame. Theis is only in case if ony one of os should not leve to come backe again but I hope wee well. But to looke at it it loocks kind of rike. Well as I have no more to tell you theis time for I told it all to Mary Klein—only I wishes you and all your family more happy returns.

And I remain truly yours,
PETER JOHNSON.

Surrogate Livingston cited Mrs. Klein and others to appear before him for the purpose of proving the will. The letter was written at Onalashka.

NO STOMACH FOR FIGHTING.

Riddleberger Will Not Fight a Duel With Page McCarthy.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, December 5.—In an interview with Capt. Riddleberger at the Gilsey House, yesterday, relative to the rumored approaching duel between him and Maj. McCarthy, the former said: "I am not aware of any trouble with Maj. McCarthy, or Colonel, or whatever he is. I do not know what position he held during the war. I have not heard from him, nor have I seen what he has published in the newspapers. I have been told that it is pretty rough, however."

"Shall you accept a challenge to fight if he sends you one?" asked the reporter.

"From what I have been told I should judge that the boot was on the other foot."

"Then do you expect to challenge him?"

"No; I have no stomach for fighting now. There was a time when I was afraid to say that much, but I am free to confess that I have had quite enough fighting in my time, and I think perhaps it might just as well be understood now as later."

A SERIOUS CHARGE.

Litigation Growing Out of an Assignment in Louisville.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LOUISVILLE, December 5.—A sensational suit was filed here to-day in the Chancery Court which caused no little commotion in business circles. It was brought by John R. Durff against his former partner, John L. Wheat, and contains allegations against the latter gentleman which, if sustained, will utterly ruin the character of one of Louisville's oldest and most respected merchants. The plaintiff and defendant in 1877 entered into partnership and opened a wholesale grocery, the agreement being that Durff was to put in $15,000 and Wheat $20,000 as capital. Until May, 1882, the firm did an apparently prosperous business, but at that time, to the surprise of every one, an assignment was made and some time afterward a settlement was agreed to by the creditors at fifty cents on the dollar. Rumors were circulated at that time to the effect that everything was not as it should be, but the first positive inkling of crookedness was given by Mr. Durff. In the action to-day he alleges that Wheat never paid in his part of the capital as agreed; that he used the cash of the firm to the amount of $10,000 to pay the debts of an old firm with which it had no connection, and did this without the latter's knowledge. He also said that Wheat used the money and credit of the firm to establish a cotton mill at Frankfort without the plaintiff's knowledge, and finally that the books of the firm prior to April 1st, 1882, showed a shortage in cash of $4,000, and from April to May 1st a further shortage of $6,597. As Wheat had exclusive charge of the books and accounts and financial management of the firm, plaintiff alleges that he is responsible for the shortage as well as for the other money used as above. Plaintiff further alleges that, although the assignee is aware of this shortage, he still keeps defendant in full charge of the books, and he asks that a receiver be appointed to take charge of the remaining assets. In conclusion the plaintiff enters a prayer for judgment against defendant, John L. Wheat, for a proper and equitable relief. Wheat is a prominent member of the Methodist Church, and has always been considered a man of strict integrity.

THE DEATH WATCH.

The Daring Burglar and Murderer McGloin Awaiting His Doom.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, December 5.—A reporter called at the Tombs yesterday to inquire in regard to the truth of the report that the death watch of McGloin, the condemned murderer, had been posted. "It has not," said Warden Finn, "but I have just received a letter from the Sheriff saying that it will be posted to-morrow morning at 6 o'clock. Deputy Sheriffs Aarons and Douglass will form the first watch and they will be relieved by Deputy Sheriffs O'Brien and Hagan."

"Can I see McGloin?"

"Certainly—give this gentleman a pass to see McGloin." This last sentence to a brass-bound blue-coated official behind a grating, who thereupon gave the reporter a little slip of paper on which was written in pencil the word "McGloin," and a dirty card which entitled the bearer not only to the privilege of entering the prison, but the greater pleasure of coming out again. Numerous heavy doors swung back before the "open sesame" of the bit of dirty cardboard, and the reporter at length found himself in the long corridor from which open the cells of the heterogenous mass of criminals who are confined in the Tombs. It was visiting hour, and the place was full of the friends of the prisoners. McGloin's cell is No. 7, and before it stood two poorly-dressed young men apparently about twenty years old, who were conversing with the prisoner through the grating of his cell door. They were of the class of young men usually denominated "toughs," but their bravado was all gone, and the impending fate of their companion behind the bars seemed to have a humanizing effect on them for the time being at least. All that could be seen of McGloin was his face, framed in the square hole at the wooden inner door of his cell. His face was of sickly pallor which was heightened by the black eyes and hair. The expression in his eyes was something terrible to look at. All his bravado, all his recklessness is gone. The daring burglar and murderer, the reckless youth who defied law and gospel, has become under the strain of alternate hope and despair, the long imprisonment and the ever present shadow of the gallows, like a child. Pity is the only feeling one who sees him now can have for the boy.

"Have you any hopes of a reprieve," asked the reporter.

"No sir, very little hope now."

"Will there be any effort made by your counsel to get a reprieve?"

"That I cannot say, sir. It rests with them. I am afraid there is little hope for me now."

One of the counsel for McGloin said later in the day that the case would be carried to the Court of Appeals and a reprieve granted to McGloin until the case had been decided there.

CLEVERLY CAUGHT.

A Well Planned Elopement Spoiled by the Police.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MONTREAL, December 5.—A very pretty elopement was spoiled here to-day by the police. Miss Jessie Raffenberg is the pretty daughter of a leading citizen of Muskegon, Mich. She was enamoured of a young Montreal man named Joseph Roch, who had been a temporary resident of Muskegon. She was fifteen and lovable, and Joseph loved her, but the parents forbade the pair to meet. Therefore clandestine courtship followed. One day early last week Jessie quietly took the train from Muskegon and came East. Joseph was suspected of knowing the reason of her sudden departure. He would not take the agonized parents into his confidence, and two days afterwards he also suddenly disappeared. He did not get away as quietly as he liked, however. C. M. King, a deputy sheriff and detective, of Muskegon, and came on with young Lochinvar to Montreal. Joseph was quite taken aback when he saw that the detective was on the train, but was in absolute despair when the Montreal police arrested him. At first he refused to confess any knowledge of Jessie's whereabouts, but at length he admitted that she was awaiting him at a hotel in Sarnia, where he was to have joined her. Sarnia is just opposite Port Huron, Michigan, and Roach would have joined Jessie there had he not noticed the detective shadowing him. Jessie has been sent home to her mama by force of the law, while Joseph mourns that the astuteness of the detective has spoiled him of a pretty and loving wife.

BOARDED THE SAME TRAIN

A Reform Paper.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, December 5.—Ex-Congressmen J. B. Weaver and E.H. Gillette, of Iowa, have bought the Dubuque State Tribune, and say they intend to make it a "genuine reform paper."

FELL OVERBOARD.

Mr. R. Strauss, of Boston, a passenger on the steamer Servia, which arrived yesterday, disappeared during the first night out from Queenstown, and it is believed that he accidentally fell overboard. Although his behavior had been regarded as eccentric, there does not appear to be any motive for an intentional death.

A QUICK PASSAGE.

The American Line steamship Illinois, which arrived at Queenstown yesterday, made the passage from Philadelphia to Browhead in eight days and thirteen hours.

Held for Action.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, December 5.—Coroner Knox and a jury held an investigation yesterday in the case of Geo. Saunders, of No. 45 Allen street, who died a few days ago from a stab wound inflicted by Christian Grawe. The evidence showed that the accused stole an overcoat from Saunders and hearing that he was to be arrested for it he made an appointment with Saunders through a mutual friend to meet him on the 19th of November at No. 130 Mott street, where he was to return the coat. The jury found Grawe guilty, and he was committed to the Tombs to await the action of the Grand Jury. Thos. Lodge and Cool Dressner were committed to the House of Detention as witnesses.

Attorney-General Brewster.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, December 5.—Attorney-General Brewster and Mrs. Brewster arrived at the Brevoort House yesterday for a brief social visit in the metropolis. Mr. Brewster will return to Washington to-day and will personally direct the prosecution in the Star Route cases. He says that he never had an acquaintance with ex-Senator Dorsey and would not know him if he were to meet him in the street. In common with ex-Attorney-General MacVeagh and ex-Postmaster-General James, Mr. Brewster declines to enter into any controversy with the accused persons in the Star Route cases or to notice what he terms "Mr. Dorsey's abusive letters."

Lee, the Sculler.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, December 5.—To-day Mr. George W. Lee, the sculler, accompanied by Mr. Peter Duryea, will sail for England in the steamship Arizona. Mr. Duryea has offered to match Lee against any sculler in England for from $500 to $1,000 a side for a race of three miles to be rowed on any water mutually agreed upon, in England, during next March.

Transferred Her Interest.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, December 5.—Mrs. Hannah G. Gerry, a sister of the late Jesse B. Goelet, has transferred all of her interest in the Goelet estate through the deceased's will to [illegible] children. Almy G. and Elbredge T. Gerry. The consideration was natural love and affection. [illegible]

LABOUCHERE VS. LANGTRY.

The Quarrel of the Jersey Lily With Her Chaperone.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, December 5.—Mrs. Labouchere quitted the Albemarle Hotel yesterday to go to Richmond, Va. She said that, instead of the disarranged tour of the country with Mrs. Langtry, she would visit Washington after seeing some old friends in Virginia. As to her separation from the professional beauty, she reaffirmed that there had been no quarrel, but would give no further particulars than that Mrs. Langtry's conduct was such that she could not countenance it. From such vague outgivings scandalous stories went the rounds of the theaters and clubs and several names were used recklessly. A lady who knows both Mrs. Langtry and Mrs. Labouchere and has been with them considerably told a Sun reporter last evening that Mrs. Langtry had proved ungrateful for the stage advancement which Mrs. Labouchere had given her and was inclined to resent her well-meant advice as an interference. This lady added that, though Mrs. Langtry had been somewhat careless of appearances in this city, there was no ground for scandal, and that certainly none of the admirers named in the rumors had accompanied the Lily to Boston. She attributed some of these tales to members of the Langtry company who had become antagonistic to the star in consequence of the rigid policy of subordinating them on the stage and thereby preventing them from doing themselves justice. It is said on the other hand that Mrs. Langtry's reason for breaking with Mrs. Labouchere was that she lost social opportunities on Mrs. Labouchere's account, being debarred from accepting invitations that did not include the latter lady. Mrs. Langtry, it is said, determined that she should not submit herself to a similar experience in Boston. As to the scandal which has been made about Mrs. Langtry's presence at bachelor parties, and acquaintance with certain stock-broking gentlemen, the report is unkind enough to attribute it in part to overeagerness to be seen in the company of a lady of her present celebrity, and to be distinguished by any association of their names with hers is the talk of the day.

A FAMILY FUNERAL.

Husband and Father-in-Law Quarreling Over the Selection of the Cemetery.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, December 5.—About five years ago Miss Agnes Van Pelt, daughter of John Van Pelt, of Annedale, was married to Patrick Butler, a brickmaker of Freshkills. Mrs. Butler was a Protestant and her husband a Catholic. They lived together until about a year ago, when Mrs. Butler returned to her father's house in ill health. On Saturday last she died of consumption. Butler wanted to take charge of the remains, but his father-in-law refused to comply with his request. He (Van Pelt) proposed to have his daughter buried in the Moravian Cemetery, at New Dorp. Butler was determined that the burial should take place at Haverstraw. One word brought on another, which resulted, it is alleged, in Butler taking Mrs. Van Pelt by the throat. Van Pelt rescued his wife, and Butler was roughly handled. The police were summoned and several officers were detailed to guard the body and preserve the peace. The time set for the funeral was 9 a. m. yesterday, and at that hour two undertakers, Messrs. Oates and Vaughan, put in an appearance with two hearses. Oates had been engaged to take the body to Haverstraw, and Vaughan had been employed by Van Pelt to bury the remains in the cemetery at New Dorp. The rival undertakers took things good-naturedly in the presence of the police while they awaited developments. Meanwhile the funeral services were being held in the house. At the close of the services an attempt was made to adjust the difficulty, but without success. Butler insisted upon his right to bury his wife. After further consultation it was decided to place the remains in a receiving vault at the New Dorp Cemetery until the matter could be settled. Undertaker Vaughan placed the coffin in one of the hearses and conveyed it to the cemetery. The police then withdrew and quiet was restored in the village.

DR. HAMILTON.

Serious Illness of One of President Garfield's Physicians.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, December 5.—Dr. Frank H. Hamilton, who was one of President Garfield's physicians, is lying seriously ill at his residence, 48 west Thirty-second street. On Thanksgiving Day he appeared to be in perfect health, with the exception of a throat affection which had caused him hoarse for many months. At [illegible] on the following afternoon he was seized with a hemorrhage which appeared to come from the lungs. It prostrated him at once. Dr. John H. Hinton was summoned. He said he did not believe that the patient's lungs were affected. The hemorrhage seemed to be due to bronchial irritation and congestion produced by a cold. Dr. Hamilton had and two on Sunday. Dr. Leaming and Dr. Austin Flint, Sr., were summoned to a consultation. They announced afterward to the family that the patient would probably recover. The hemorrhages, they said, were more of a relief than otherwise, and his recovery was more likely than if they did not occur. The patient had another hemorrhage yesterday morning, and there was another consultation of the doctors in the afternoon. Dr. Hamilton himself is confident he will recover. He does not talk to any one, but writes replies to questions. On Sunday he wrote an essay on the use of tobacco. He insists on having the newspapers read to him morning and evening.

TWO MORE HEMORRHAGES,

Accident to Gen. Bowen.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, December 5.—General James Bowen, who was once a Police Commissioner and Commissioner of Charities and Correction, and Provost Marshal at New Orleans, met with an accident yesterday. He had come to New York from his country residence at Hastings on the Hudson, and had hired apartments for himself and Mrs. Bowen at No. 3 Washington Square North. At 11 o'clock he left the house to tell Miss Harriet Weed that he had hired the rooms, and was at Twelfth street and Fifth avenue, when he slipped backward on the icy covering of the avenue, and struck the back of his head with such force as to render him unconscious. He was carried into a house near by, and his name and address were found on a card in his pocket-book. He revived, however, and was able, with some aid, to walk home. Drs. John M. Carnochan and S. R. Elliott found him suffering from slight concussion of the brain, and, although they did not consider the injury serious, they recommended rest and directed Mrs. Bowen to prevent any one from annoying him by questioning him about the accident.

The Telegraph Fight.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

DAYTON, O., December 5.—The mandatory injunction was made perpetual to-day by Judge Dennis Dwyer, of the Superior Court, restraining the Western Union Telegraph Company from discriminating against the Mutual Union in the matter of receiving and transmitting dispatches offered by the Mutual Union Company. The case grew out of the defendant's refusal to receive dispatches from the hands of the Mutual Union when said dispatches are sent to the Mutual Union office and destined for points not reached by the Mutual Union lines. This is the first decision on this question rendered by a United States Judge.

Coolly Received.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

BOSTON, MASS., December 5.—Mrs. Langtry was rather coolly received here last night at the Globe Theater. She played in "An Unequal Match." As a whole it must be said that she disappointed Boston, and as to her personal charms it seems to be the opinion that there were twenty Boston ladies in the audience who equaled her in beauty.

PAYING THE PENSIONS.

Sad and Interesting Scenes at the General Office in New York.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, December 5.—The December quarterly payment at the Pension Agency took place yesterday, and all day long, from 4 o'clock this morning until late at night, the receivers of the nation's bounty came and went. The upper hall was devoted to the payment of women. Here, behind a railing, sat a number of clerks of both sexes busily filling out pension papers and administering the oath to the witnesses. The room was filled to the utmost capacity by widows, the mothers and daughters of soldiers who died in the war of the rebellion. Those who were young wives when their husbands marched away sat there in the waiting throng, now portly middle-aged matrons. The daughter, whose father kissed her for the last time in the cradle, came up to get her penison a full grown woman. Now and then a feeble old woman would totter up and sign with trembling hand a pension paper which bore the name of her dead son. The room down stairs was filled with men, wrecks of the terrible storm of civil war. Some had an

There were many of those groups gathered around unlighted camp-fires and recalling adventures and experiences which the lapse of years had not rendered any less remarkable. About $36,000 was paid out in the course of the day.

Death of a Very Prominent Physician and Mason in New Jersey.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, December 5.—Dr. John C. G. Robertson, one of the oldest physicians in Paterson, N. J., died in that city on Sunday, aged nearly 66 years. He was born in Glasgow, and, having passed through the Royal Medical College of Edinburgh, practiced his profession for several years in the latter city and for three years in the British army. In 1847 he came to America and settled in Paterson, where he has since remained, with the exception of two or three years spent in Boston. He was one of the most prominent members of the Masonic fraternity in the country. He was chosen Master of Joppa Lodge, of Paterson, in 1855, and several times since. He was one of the charter members of Cataract City Chapter of Royal Arch Masons in 1860, and in 1865 he was elected Grand High Priest of the Grand Chapter of New Jersey. About this time he received

He was also a member of the Knights Templar, and of various other higher branches of the Masonic order.

Fifteen or twenty years ago he was a prominent member of of the Peterson Caledenian Club, which gave annual exhibitions of the old Scotch athletic games. He was an earnest Republican, but always refused to be a candidate for office. His death resulted from Bright's disease, complicated with dropsy. The funeral will take place this afternoon and will be largely attended by the Masonic fraternity.

WHY DID SHE DO IT?

A Girl's Suicide—Tragedy in a Small Pennsylvania Town.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

GREENSBURG, PA., December 5.—A gentleman just returned from Salina, a little town on the West Pennsylvania road six miles west of Saltsburg, reports the place in a fever of excitement over the tragic suicide of a young lady. The suicide took place about 5 o'clock yesterday morning, in a boarding house kept by a man named Heiner. The victim's name is Stoop, and her residence is on the West Pennsylvania road a short distance below the scene of the tragedy. She has been acting in the capacity of housekeeper for Mr. Heiner, and it is said had formed an intimacy with a married man who boards at the house, and who, it is reported, has a wife and child in Allegheny City. Miss Stoop was heard in earnest conversation with this man until 4 o'clock yesterday morning, at which time she retired to bed. An hour later the report of a pistol was heard. It aroused several of the boarders, but it was supposed at the time that the shot had been fired out of the house, and no attempt was made to investigate. When Miss Stoop failed to make her appearance at the usual time suspicion was aroused, and, after a fruitless effort to arouse her, her door was broken down and she was found lying dead in her bed, with a revolver clutched tightly in her right hand and a bullet hole in her head. A butcher knife and large-bladed pen knife were found under the pillow. The revolver was identified as that of the married man who had sat up with her the night before. He was called upon to make an explanation. He denied knowledge of the contemplated suicide. He declared that he had lent the young lady his revolver a couple of weeks ago for an entirely different purpose, as he supposed, and he had no suspicion of the fatal use to which it was to be put. An inquest on the remains will be held to-morrow, and the advisability of placing the owner of the revolver under arrest to await results is suggested by some of the residents of Salina.

STRANGE SUICIDE.

A Negro is Pressed to Death in a Bale of Cotton.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

RALEIGH, N. C., December 5.—On November 20 James Bradley, a negro living at Bell's Ferry, Pitt county, disappeared, and all search for him proved fruitless. He was about to marry a woman of that section, when two women came from Hyde county, each of whom declared she was Bradley's wife, and each exhibited a child, of which he was alleged to be the father. These developments broke off the marriage and threw Bradley into a fit of rage and despair. He went to the cotton gin house, while the laborers were at dinner, it is thought, and threw himself into the half-filled box in which the cotton is packed into bales. When the laborers returned the box was filled and the bale was pressed, bagged and sold. In a few days it was shipped to Greenville. There a trader, cutting into it, found a shoe. This, to his horror, he found to contain a foot. The bale was then torn apart by the eager crowd, when the body of Bradley was exposed, pressed flat and with the head crushed to a jelly. The evidence shows that the negro, declaring that he would end his life, took several drinks and then threw himself in the press. The case excites unusual and widespread excitement. It was at first stated that Bradley had been thrown into the press, but this was proved to have been false, although the laborers were all discharged.

BODY SNATCHERS.

Wholesale Arrests Made in the Streets of Philadelphia.

PHILADELPHIA, December 5.—Frank McNamee, "Dutch" Piliet and Levy Chew, the latter colored, were arrested last night while driving a wagon containing five dead bodies to the Medical College. The bodies had been stolen from Lebanon Cemetery, in the lower part of the city. Two more arrests were made this morning when, a detective visited the cemetery and arrested Robert Chew, the superintendent, and Andrew Mullen. All the prisoners will have a hearing this afternoon.

The prisoner Frank McNamee had a contract with the Government for carrying the mails between this city and Newton Square, Delaware county.

HANNIBAL HAMLIN.

The Minister to Spain, Declines to Do Any Talking.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, December 5.—The Hon. Hannibal Hamlin, United States Minister to Spain, arrived here yesterday afternoon on the steamship Servia. He is accompanied by Mrs. Hamlin, and is on his way to his home in Maine. He declined to make public any statements concerning his reasons for returning from Madrid. "I am off on leave of absence," he said, "but do not think I shall return. I shall go straight home, tarrying only a few days in Boston. I have no opinion on public matters that the public could be interested in, and prefer to say nothing."

The Work of Villains.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., December 5.—Some villains last night raised six paddles in the second lock of the Erie Canal at Brighton, just off East Avenue. The water overflowed the banks, washing out the tow path for fifty feet, and the prism, eight feet below the bottom; flowing from the canal across East avenue. The water carried away two small bridges and destroyed the culverts on both the direct line and the Auburn branches of the New York Central Railway, of which the tracks were also washed away. Seven cars of a freight train passing at the time were ditched. The trains were all delayed. The perpetrators of the mischief were not detected.

It contains about 700,000,000 feet of the best pine timber in the State. One hundred thousand lumbermen are at work there now and double that number will be employed shortly.

AN ANGRY WOMAN.

She Will Apply for the Arrest of Advocate-General Swaim.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, December 5.—Mrs. M. A. Butler intends to apply in the Police Court to-morrow morning for the arrest of Gen. Swaim, Judge Advocate-General of the Army, and Col. Corbin, who have been the Chief Managers of the Garfield Monument Fair. Mrs. Butler is the manager of the Woman's Labor Exchange of this city, which was organized to relieve needy women, especially the wives and daughters of soldiers of the war. She went to the Capitol this morning and asked that some of the dress goods and other cheap materials left over from the fair be given to the exchange. She says that in response to her request she was grossly insulted, both by Gen. Swaim and Col. Corbin, and was threatened with arrest as a public nuisance. It is possible also that a court-martial may be called to inquire into the matter.

An Important Decision.

WASHINGTON, December 5.—The Secretary of the Interior rendered a decision to-day, sustaining the position of the Commissioner-General of the Land Office in the matter of Byron Roberts & Co. vs. Henry Foote et al., and denying the request of the former that the filings of the defendant be canceled and that the plaintiff be permitted to make proof of payment for the land embraced in his survey. The matter at issue in this case is the title to the Pagosa Mineral Springs of Colorado. The Secretary holds that the question of the non-mineral character of the land has been fully settled heretofore.

AN INDIAN RAID.

A report received at the Indian Office from Fort Custer is to the effect that a party of twenty Indians, supposed to be Piegans, made a raid upon the Crow scouts near Little Big Horn and ran off four hundred head of ponies; that the Crows pursued the marauders and recovered the stolen stock and killed two of the thieves, and that the Piegans threatened to steal the Crows' provisions for this winter.

Scenes in the House.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, D.C., December 5.—The House enjoyed several scenes yesterday. A smile went around when it was perceived that the Speaker, faithful to his friend and creator, Mr. Robeson, had quietly arranged to place that defeated worthy at the head of the committee to wait on the President and tell him that the House was ready for business. It was remarked that Mr. Keifer possesses the rare virtue of gratitude. Mr. Hiscock, chairman of the Appropriations Committee, also raised a laugh by hurrying to his feet as soon as the House was ready for business and offering a resolution to relieve the Civil Service Reform Committee of further consideration of two bills, one forbidding political assessments, the other concerning competitive examinations, and turning these bills over to the Appropriations Committee, with instructions to have them included in the regular appropriation bills. In making this motion Mr. Hiscock violated one of the soundest rules of the House, which forbids general legislation on appropriation bills. Mr. Kasson urged that the Civil Service Committee were ready to report, and the House finally instructed the committee to report at an early day fixed, the word "instruct" being substituted on Mr. Hewitt's motion for the doubtful phrase, "have leave to report," in Mr. Kasson's motion. The Speaker had placed on his table a large anchor made of immortelles, such an object as is usually seen at funerals, and Mr. Cox raised a laugh by calling attention to the appropriateness of this absurd floral device.

Star Route Trial Postponed Again.

WASHINGTON, December 5.—The Star Route trial has been further postponed on account of a failure to complete the jury.

BREWSTER'S SUGGESTIONS.

Attorney-General Brewster has communicated to Congress his views upon the inadequacy of the compensation to United States witnesses in Western States and Territories. He believes the present law causes many suits on behalf of the Government to fail because of the ill-will of witnesses, and recommends the enactment of a law providing that witnesses and jurors from California, Oregon, Nevada, Colorado and the Territories be paid their actual expenses while attending court in lieu of the mileage and per diem now allowed by law. He also suggests, as a remedy to overcome the complaints that the Judge who presides in a district also sits in the Supreme Court when his decision is reversed, that either an additional Judge be appointed in all the Territories, or that a Circuit Judge be appointed as in the States.

BANK EXAMINER APPOINTED.

Wm. C. Oakley, of Chicago, has been appointed Bank Examiner for Illinois and Wisconsin.

A NEW BANK.

The Arkansas National Bank, of Hot Springs, was to-day authorized to begin business. Capital, $50,000.

Dickson's Trial.

WASHINGTON, December 5.—In the preliminary examination of Dickson, charged with attempting to improperly influence the Star Route jurors, McNeily, one of the jurors, testified that the accused, while in the jury room, read a newspaper article to the jurors, a majority of the panel having voted to hear it read.

McNeily, after a long examination respecting the paper read, which contained an article about an alleged interview with Bowen at Driver's restaurant, during which he is said to have attempted to bribe Dickson, said: "The paper was introduced to influence the jury, but it didn't do it." McNeily's statements were corroborated by other witnesses, and Alexander, a stenographer, then testified to the correctness of the printed record of the Star Route trial.

Missouri's Contribution.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, December 4.—The report of the Committee on Internal Revenue shows that Missouri paid in last year $7,590,000 internal revenue tax, being a greater sum than in any former year. The largest sum ever paid by the State of Missouri was $6,500,000, except in 1866, when, under war pressure, the sum rose to over $7,000,000. The State has paid since 1863 over $100,000,000 of internal revenue tax. Only six States have paid separately as large a sum in internal revenue tax as has Missouri. These are Illinois, Ohio, Pennsylvania, New York, Kentucky and Massachusetts. The total amount of internal revenue paid since 1863 is $2,750,000,000, and the sum is steadily increasing.

After Jay Hubbell.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, D. C., December 5.—Congressman Willis, of Kentucky, will to-morrow introduce a resolution in the House directing the Committee on Civil Service Reform to investigate into the use of money in the late elections; also an inquiry into the amount collected from Government employes, where and how it was used, etc. His intention was to offer this on the opening day of the session, but he was absent on a committee attending the funeral of Congressman Updegraff.

The President's Petition.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, D. C., December 5.—The President is to be a petitioner before Congress this session in behalf of his bondsmen. While he was Collector of New York they were obliged to make good a deficit of $5,000 in the account of a defaulting cashier in the Custom-house. An investigation satisfied the Treasury Department that the Collector was in no way responsible, and relieved him of its payment at the time, but the bondsmen are still held for it and an act of Congress will be necesssary to relieve them of their responsibility.

XLVIII. CONGRESS.

Senate.

WASHINGTON, December 5.—In the Senate, Mr. Brown, of Georgia, presented the credentials of Mr. Barrow, who was chosen to fill the unexpired term of the late Sanator Hill. The oath of office was administered to the new Senator.

On motion of Mr. Anthony, the committees as they existed at the close of the last session were continued.

Saunders presented a memorial in relation to the admission of Dakota, and said in connection therewith that he would call up about Wednesday of next week a bill for the admission of Dakota, now on the calendar, and remarked that all doubts which may have existed as to there being a sufficient population to entitle the Territory to admission as a State must have been removed by the return of the number of votes cast there at the recent election.

Mr. Beck offered a resolution setting forth the law against levying political assessments and instructing the Judiciary Committee to investigate how much money had been collected during the recent election, how it was spent and whether there was any surplus; also to ascertain the number of persons dismissed from the public service since May, and how many of them failed to contribute. The resolution requires the committee to report before February 1. Mr. Beck gave notice that he would call up the resolution to-morrow.

After passing a bill permitting retired army officers to hold official positions in the Territories, the Senate on motion of Mr. Pendleton adjourned at 2 p. m., as a mark of respect to the late Representatives Updegraff and Lowe.

House.

WASHINGTON, December 5.—The House met at 12 m. After the reading of the journal, the Speaker proceeded to call on committees for reports.

Kelley, from the Committee on Ways and Means, reported a bill to abolish the internal revenue tax on tobacco, snuff, cigars and cigarettes. Referred to the committee of the whole, and the minority granted leave to file their views on the subject.

Anderson, of Kansas, asked that the bill be read; whereupon Kasson, in explanation, stated that the tax was taken off tobacco in all its forms, to take effect in July next, and that a strong minority dissented from the provisions of the bill.

No further reports were presented, and the House proceeded to the consideration of business on the House calendar.

A bill to amend the revised statutes so as not to exclude retired army officers from holding civil offices in the Territories gave rise to some discussion, but finally went over.

The next measure considered was a bill repealing the provision of the law for payment of three months, extra wages to seamen, providing in lieu thereof that when seamen are discharged at a foreign port they shall be provided with adequate employment on another ship or furnished with means to return home. The bill embodies substantially the recommendations on the subject by the joint committee on the decline of American shipping. Passed.

A message from the Senate announced the death of Senator Hill, and after a few touching remarks by Mr. Hammond, of Georgia, the House, as a mark of respect to the memory of the deceased, adjourned at 1:50 p. m.

HORSEWHIPPED.

The Son of a Secretary of State Assaults an Editor.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

TROY, N. Y., December 5.—This forenoon Wm. G. Carr, a son of the Secretary of State, Gen. Jos. B. Carr, assaulted Jerome B. Parmenter, editor of the Press. Carr was offended at an article which appeared in the Press in reference to his disclosing plans arranged by his father and Mayor Fitzgerald to call on the military for the settlement of the police troubles. Young Carr struck the editor several times with a cow-hide whip and was taken away by the bystanders. He threatened to kill Parmenter if he published anything more concerning him or his father. The article stated that Carr was drunk when he disclosed the intended military movement.

TROY, N. Y., December 5.—J. B. Parmenter, the proprietor and editor of the Press, has at various times published stories regarding Wm. Carr, son of the Secretary of State. The latest appeared yesterday. Parmenter accused young Carr of public intoxication, breaches of confidence, etc. The young man met Parmenter on River street this morning, and, drawing a cowhide, administered a violent castigation.

A WOMAN'S VISION

Causes Trouble Among the Seventh Day Adventists.

DETROIT, December 5.—The Seventh Day Adventist sect has its headquarters at Battle Creek, in this State, where they have an extensive publishing establishment, a noted sanitarium, a college and other institutions incident to the headquarters of a religious body. Recently the college was closed and now it turns out that grave discussions have sprung up which threaten serious consequences. The widow of the late Elder White, an acknowledged leader of the denomination, and herself very prominent in leadership also, declares she has recently had a vision wherein was revealed to her that Elder Smith, editor of the denominational organ, the Review and Herald, and Mayor Wm. C. Gage, manager of the Review, are guilty of worldliness and are, consequently, improper persons for their responsible positions. The matter is stirring up great feeling in the large community of Adventists located in Battle Creek.

Trouble With the Mormons.

SALT LAKE, December 5.—Hoar's amendment empowered the Governor to appoint municipal officers, who would have been elected last August but for the Edmunds bill. In all cases but one the incumbents refuse to turn over to the Governor's appointees. Three distinct courts have now ruled on the applications for a mandamus. Judge Hunter decided the pleadings insufficient. An amended complaint has since been filed. Emerson virtually decided the complainant entitled to office, but granted a stay of proceedings, and an appeal was taken which will be argued in the January term of the Territorial Supreme Court. It was decided that a mandamus is a proper remedy; that the offices were vacated by a lapse of election, and the Governor was therefore authorized to fill them. A motion for a stay of proceedings and an appeal will be argued on December 9.

The Order Signed.

NEW YORK, December 5.—The order in the matter of the application of Attorney-General Russell for leave to bring action in the name of the people of the State on the relation of Jay Gould and Wm. H. Cameron against the Mutual Union Telegraph Company, to vacate its charter, has been signed by Judge Truax, of the Superior Court. The petition is based on the recent proceedings had before the Attorney-General at Albany. The case will be tried in the Supreme Court of this county.

PILFERING LAW.

The Question of the Validity of the Ordinance Raised.

Judge Denison Takes the Important Question Under Advisement.

In the Second District Police Court Judge Denison to-day deferred his decision on the legality of the pilfering ordinance. The point was recently raised before that court by Mr. Joseph G. Lodge. The ordinance was passed at the solicitation of the Police Department, and, if valid, will be a saving to the city and will greatly facilitate the disposition of criminal causes. The following is a copy of the ordinance:

"Any person who shall cut, tear, rip, bore or open any bag, sack, bale, box, barrel or other package, being the property of another, containing any article of value, or who shall steal, take or carry away any article of value and of less value than $20, the property of another, or who shall secrete or hide away, or knowingly purchase, barter or trade for any article of value and of less value than $20, knowing the same to have been stolen or acquired in a questionable or surreptitious manner, within the limits of the city of St. Louis, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof before either of the Police Justices shall be fined not less than $5 nor more than $500.

"Sec. 2.—The Harbor and Wharf Commissioners and market masters, and their deputies, are hereby authorized and empowered to arrest and hold for trial all persons offending against the provisions of these sections."

Specially intended to cover that class of river stealing which is a continual source of annoyance to shippers, its advantages are patent. In addition to this it specially protects stores and places where small articles are on exhibition for sale. Previous to the passage of the ordinance it was necessary to send all such cases as come within its scope through the Court of Criminal Correction. This necessitated the issuance of a warrant and the consequent delay, during which the defendant to the charge was committed to jail and boarded at the expense of the State until the docket of the Court of Criminal Correction permitted a hearing of the case, usually four days. A continuance of the case secured the hospitalities of the jail for the defendant for another week, and usually the sentence recommitted the convicted person to the friendly precincts of that institution for a fortnight or a month longer. All these measures incurred the more expensive processes of the Court of Criminal Correction.

Speaking of the validity of the ordinance Mr. Lodge to-day said:

"Judge Denison stated to me this morning that he had not yet canvassed the question, and would retain it under advisement. The point on which the legality of the ordinance is contested is that the Municipal Assembly had no right or authority to pass such an ordinance. The only right they could have would be what is granted by the Legislature, but that body has not delegated to the Municipal Assembly any such right. The municipal body has a right to pass ordinances for the preservation of the public peace, the suppression of gambling, and similar objects of general welfare, but it has no more right to pass this ordinance than it has to take the list of crimes and draw up ordinances for each, entirely dispensing with the statutes. Stealing is and always has been a crime, and a hundred years ago men were hung for this crime which the Municipal Assembly now undertakes to legislate on. A person charged with the crime of stealing must be tried in a court on an indictment or a sworn information, but the proceedings in the Police Courts are of a civil character, and a defendant cannot be tried under the present mode of proceeding.

SICK TRANSIT.

Local Astronomers Fearing That the Weather Will Prevent Observations.

To-day's rain and the promise of its continuance is having a very depressing effect upon local astronomers. They peer into the leaden-colored roof overhead in vain for indications of a break in its moist monotony, but, as yet, no ray of hope has cheered them, and at noon to-day the most knowing among them were of the opinion that nothing short of a meteorological miracle, apparently, could provide for to-morrow the necessary clear sky for the observation of the transit of Venus, for which such careful preparation has been made in this city.

Professor Engler, of the Washington University, said to a POST-DISPATCH reporter this morning:

"It looks very much as if all our preparations will have been in vain, and that the transit, as far as St. Louis is concerned, will take place above a canopy of clouds."

"What preparations have you made?"

"We are provided here with all the necessary electrical apparatus to observe the event; we have the chronograph, fine clocks whose errors we know precisely; our latitude and longitude are known here with as much accuracy as at any station in the country, and our time observations are made regularly so that we can always tell the time within one-tenth of a second. In addition to this, since yesterday we have been receiving telegraphic signals from Washington, and we make comparison of our clocks with these signals by chronograph, so that we can compare down to the hundredth part of a second."

"Who will assist you in making the observation?"

"Prof. Nipher and several others will take part in the work if the weather permits of its accomplishment. Each of these will have at hand a telescope and an electrical key which will be in connection with the chronographic pen. These may not—they probably will not—observe the contact at precisely the same instant of time, but the difference between their observations, no matter how slight it may be, will be recorded by the pen. Besides these there will be a number of observers, specially trained for the purpose, who will take it with the naked eye, and there will be others to observe the observers to see whether they do anything wrong, and, if so, to report it. In this way we had expected to take an observation which would be among those of most reliable character, but I am afraid that all our preparations have gone for nothing."

Prof. J. F. Prince, S. J., of the St. Louis University, was also of the opinion that the only chance for St. Louis' astronomers to observe a transit of Venus will be to wait patiently until the next one, which comes off in the pleasant month of June, 2004. He said that the St. Louis University had made arrangements to take observations at the College Hill, where apparatus was ready for the purpose. He was to be in charge of the work, which, though not conducted with the electrical and other appliances to be used at Washington University, would be of value. The outlook, however, was such that he was afraid all preparations to improve the rare opportunity had been made in vain.

The Law Courts.

There were no decisions rendered by the Court of Appeals.

A pro forma decree of incorporation was issued to-day to the St. Louis Long Range Rifle Association.

Judge Thayer to-day granted a decree of incorporation to the St. Louis Protestant Hospital Association.

Judge Lindley to-day allowed Receiver Sam C. Clubb, of the Keokuk Northern Line Packet Company, $10,000 for his services.

Petitions for divorce were entered to-day by Mrs. Louisa C. Robinson against James H. Robinson, and by Fidel De Mere against Jennie De Mere. Orders of publication were granted, the parties being absent from the State.

Judge Lindley this morning stepped down from the bench of Court No. 4, and his place was at once taken by Judge Horner, who proceeded with the trial docket. Mr. Gus Priest, the Clerk of Court No. 2, came with Judge Horner and filled the desk that used to be occupied by Alex Garesche. Judge Lindley will sit this month in Court No. 2.

MRS. JOHN STORK, St. Louis, Mo., says: "I have used Brown's Iron Bitters for general debility and have been benefited."

Honesty on 'Change.

Charley Green, the Baltimore and Ohio messenger boy, who found $1,100 and returned it to its owner, was on the floor of the Merchants' Exchange to-day, where he attracted great attention as one of the curiosities of the age. He was taken into the "option pit" and gravely passed examination upon by the operators, who had heard or read of such honesty in their Sunday school books, but never before had an opportunity of personally inspecting what they had always looked upon as a myth. Then, under the guidance of D. R. Francis and John White, little Charley was steered around the floor, gathering in the reward that should always fall to honesty and virtue. One gentleman, who, strange to say, requested that his name be kept private, was so interested in the rare phenomenon, presented to him that he unconsciously dropped a "V" into the boy's hand. Other parties testified their ignorance of the honesty possessed by the lad, but their appreciation of this unknown virtue by the donation of different small amounts, ranging from a nickel up to a dollar, according as the different donors regarded this virtue. About $27 was raised and presented to Master Charley.

THE RAILROADS.

Doings in Local Circles—Changes—Appointments—Personal.

Last week the east-bound shipments of freight from Chicago aggregated nearly 47,000 tons.

The Bee Line brought in this morning fifty-five English and Scotch emigrants for the Southwest.

Hon. Jno. C. Brown and party who have been in the Southwest for some time, will return Thursday.

The old Iron Mountain Plum Street Depot has been razed to the ground, and a cotton platform is building in its stead.

To succeed Mr. Cole as assistant general freight agent of the Missouri Pacific, Mr. H. A. Johnson, for some time a chief clerk in Mr. Old's office, has been appointed.

The Louisville and Nashville, in addition to their arrangements, will soon put on a through sleeper to Nashville, thus giving passengers by their route but one change to Jacksonville, Fla.

Mr. Geo. Benedict, formerly with the passenger department of the C. B. U. P., has accepted a position in the General Passenger office of the Missouri Pacific, and will be here to-day to begin work.

A called meeting of the Western Association of General Passenger Agents has been announced for December 12, to convene in Indianapolis. The special object of the call is a thorough revision of "basing" rates.

The Iron Mountain brought in yesterday 2,956 bales of cotton, the Missouri Pacific 934 bales of cotton and 148 cars of grain. The total number of loaded cars brought in by the Missouri Pacific yesterday was 341.

Mr. T. E. Cassidy, for four years General Freight Agent os the 'Frisco, has resigned and named as his successor Mr. Geo. W. Cole, for some time Assistant General Freight Agent of the Missouri Pacific under Geo. C. Olds, G. F. A. Poor health was the cause of Mr. Cassidy's resignation.

The office of the Assistant Superintendent of the Bee Line, heretofore situated at Union City, Ind., has been removed to Indianapolis. This change was made because of the removal of the Superintendent's office to this city, and may in a manner assuage the grief of Indianapolis over Mr. Gale's removal hither.

Charley Lemon, ticket agent of the C. B. & Q., is as happy this morning as a boy with his first pair of boots or suspenders. The ticket printing machine in use by his road is now in operation and the first ticket for sale was printed this morning. The apparatus is most complete and a very ingenious piece of mechanism, well repaying a visit to the office to see it at work.

The L. & N. has just issued one of the most complete folders in existence. One side of the large sheet is devoted to time schedules, a description of the system, and the other side is given up to a map of the entire United States and the Canadas. On one end of this side are given plans of the large cities touched by the line, showing the situation of the depots and railroads. This feature of the map is copyrighted by the company, and is no doubt a valuable means of information to the traveling public.

The baggage runs over the Missouri Pacific have been considerably lengthened, and the baggagemen are now compelled to run to Denver City, a distance of 623 miles. It is the longest baggage run in the world and requires thirty-eight hours of almost incessant work, without any interval for sleep or rest. The boys thought their work before was entirely too arduous, but this lengthening of the hours of work and shortening of the hours of the lay-off to about eighteen or twenty hours, is outrageous, they think.

The earnings of the Missouri Pacific Railway, operated and leased lines for the week ending November 30, 1882, were $1,003,947 70, for the corresponding week of 1881, they were $765,958 23, showing an increase of $237,989 47 for one week. Of the above total the Missouri Pacific Railway earned $251,684 31 and the Iron Mountain $250,390 59. At this rate the increase of the earnings of '82 over those of '81 will amount to about $15,000,000, a fact that speaks in loud tones of praise for the present management and the very effective manner in which this stupendous railway system is conducted.

Mr. Harvey Tilden, contracting agent of the Union Switch and Signal Company of Pittsburg, arrived in the city from Cincinnati, this morning. Mr. Tilden represents the company that is equipping the Union Depot yards and tunnel with a patent interlocking switch and signal apparatus, and came here to superintend the work already begun some time ago. Most of the material for these improvements is on the ground and the work is being pushed forward as rapidly as possible. The apparatus will not be in complete working order quite as soon as expected, but the year 1883 will not be many weeks old before the railroad terminal facilities of St. Louis, through this switch apparatus, will have the most complete arrangements for moving trains in the West.

The Committee Appointed.

In answer to the request of Grier Brothers and Boyd & Hull for an arbitration of their deals in November corn, Vice-President Orthwein to-day appointed as a committee to hear and decide upon the evidence in this matter E. O. Stanard, John Wahl and Col. Thomas Richeson. This is a truly gilt edged committee, and meets with the approval of both the longs and the shorts interested in the deal. Geo. Grier says that he is perfectly satisfied with this committee, as he knows from the reputation enjoyed by these gentlemen that they are high-minded, honorable men, who will give both sides justice. The case is set for trial on Thursday, December 7, at 3 p. m.

CITY HALL NOTES.

Mayor Ewing is confined to his house by a slight attack of illness to-day.

Receipts at the City Treasury to-day are: from the City Collector $26,602 60; from the Boiler Inspector $35.

At the meeting of the Board of Public Improvements this morning bids were received for the improvement of Pine street between Cabanne and Vandeventer avenues. The contract will be awarded by the board to-morrow.

John O'Malley, an unmarried laborer, stepped off the second story landing of his residence, No. 1224 Broadway, last night. The result was a broken collar bone and the fracture of several ribs. He was brought to the City Dispensary this morning and subsequently transferred to the City Hospital.

The Board of Public Improvements will meet the Committee on Public Improvements of the House of Delegates and property owners interested in the matter of the grade of Rosatti or Menard street, on Thursday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, for the purpose of making an inspection of the locality mentioned.

Mayor Ewing will, this evening, transmit to the Municipal Assembly the semi-annual report of the Mullanphy Fund Commissioners for the six months ending August 31, 1882. The total receipts during that period were $22,592 97, and the total expenditures $22,301 88. Ten hundred and thirty-two emigrants and three hundred and fifty-two families obtained relief. The total value of the Mullanphy bequest on August 31, 1882, was $394,857 41.

Martin Shelley came to the City Dispensary this morning in a demoralized condition. Several wounds disfigured his hands and face, and a severe pain made itself felt in his right side. He stated to the physician in charge that he arrived in the city on Sunday night, and that on Seventh and Spruce streets shortly afterwards he was assaulted by two negroes, who robbed him of $35 and then left him to do the best he could. His wounds were dressed at the Dispensary, after which he was sent to the City Hospital to recuperate.

Applicants for for the appointment as Justice of the Peace in the Ninth District, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Judge Patrick Farren, are numerous. The appointment is for the unexpired portion of Judge Farrell's term, or until the election in 1886. Among other applicants are: Judge Aug. W. Eberhardt, Richard T. Brophy, M. Goldsmith, Wm. F. Vittinghoff and Judge Field. The application of Judge Field is indorsed by a number of the members of the St. Louis bar, and he is generally regarded as having the best prospects of securing the appointment.

ABOUT TOWN.

THE body of a male infant was found in an ash box in the rear of 1215 Buel street this morning.

A FIRE was discovered about 6:13 this morning at 2313 Menard street, occupied by H. Niehaus, a cooper. The flames were extinguished with a loss of about $50. The cause of the fire was a defective flue.

EDWARD ROEHL brought suit to-day against Richard P. McClure for $10,000 damages, for injuries sustained in October last through the falling of a derrick, which was in charge of McClure, foreman, who had failed to properly secure it.

THE divorce case of Augusta M. against Russell T. Trail is occupying Judge Thayer's time to-day. The evidence shows cruel treatment and neglect on the part of the husband, and such incompatibility of temper as makes it impossible for them to live together in domestic peace.

SIGNIFICANT FIGURES.

San Francisco to the Front With a Personal Tax Assessment of $50,105,994.

Mayor Ewing this morning received a copy of the annual report of the city of San Francisco for the year 1882. The book is handsomely printed on clean white paper, is bound in heavy Turkey morocco leather, and is ornamented with photographic portraits of the Mayor and the twelve Councilmen of the city by the Golden Gate. The reports which it contains are of the usual kind. Perhaps the most interesting pages in the book are those containing the list of property-owners who are taxed as the owners of personal property of the value of $5,000 and over. The total assessment on personal property foots up $50,105,994. The total assessment on personal property in the city of St. Louis for the year 1882 was $31,726,900, or nearly $20,000,000 less than in San Francisco. And yet San Francisco has nearly 100,000 less of population than St. Louis.

The Jeannette Case.

WASHINGTON, December 5.—Ninderman, in the Jeannette court to-day, continued the narrative of the journey south. He detailed the separation from De Long, upon the occasion when he and Noros started in search of a settlement, in a very pathetic manner and explained how they prepared a boot-sole by soaking and turning it until they were able to eat it with their willow tea. After this was exhausted they ate deer bones.

RETIRED.

Col. T. S. Laidley, U. S. A., was placed on the retired list to-day.

COURT OF CLAIMS.

The Court of Claims to-day adjourned till Monday next.

THE SOTELDO CASE.

The warrant in the Soteldo case was nolle prosequied this afternoon.

The Tobacco Tax.

WASHINGTON, December 5.—The report of the Committee on Ways and Means, accompanying the bill abolishing the internal revenue taxes on tobacco, etc., says that the revenue derived from tobacco in 1882 aggregated nearly $48,000,000, and adds: "The committee is persuaded that the time has come when these taxes should be repealed. As tobacco is one of the staples that enter into our international trade, the Government should, at the earliest possible day, remove every restriction therefrom as a measure of sound commercial policy." Kasson, of Iowa, will probably draw up the statement containing the views of the minority.

Anna Von Behren's Funeral.

NEW YORK, December 5.—The funeral of Anna Von Behren, the young actress who was shot and killed by Frank Frayne during a performance at Cincinnati, took place this afternoon from the Bedford Avenue Baptist Church, in Brooklyn, and was largely attended. Numerous floral tributes were sent by theatrical friends and rested on and around the casket. The principal mourners were the girl's family, Frank Frayne and the members of the company in which she performed. The sermon was preached by Rev. Hiram Hutchins, who spoke feelingly of the unfortunate girl's death. The body was taken to Greenwood for interment.

CITY PERSONALS.

Maj. Tom Ochiltree, of Texas, is in the city, stopping at the Lindell.

Dr. James B. McGuffin left last evening for his home at Dobson, North Carolina, after having visited his sister, Mrs. Davis, at Centralia, Mo.

Capt. E. C. Thomas, of the Plattsburg Register, who supported Hon. J. E. Jones so strongly in his late fight, is a candidate for Doorkeeper of the Thirty-second General Assembly, and is a favorite for the place with many members of the St. Louis delegation.

A Public Ceremony.

The bust of the late Hon. Thomas Allen will be unveiled in the main hall of the Southern Hotel at 7:30 o'clock this evening, with appropriate ceremonies. The occasion being a public, one no invitations have been issued except to subscribers, the understanding being that all who take an interest in the proceedings will be welcome guests at the ceremony.

Wall Street News.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, December 5.—The market was at the best prices of the day and advancing, when a report was circulated of a heavy reduction in the freight rates on the Gould roads. The report was officially denied, but not in time to allow recovery. The short interest appears to be increasing, although there is a manifest bullishness among the traders. Shrewed brokers covered much of their stock yesterday morning. Gould and Vanderbilt's operations are not very manifest. Their brokers, however, are by no means idle. A good borrowing demand prevails, especially for St. Paul and coal stocks. Two strong parties appeared bidding for Omaha, the Rock Island and Omaha interest and the Vanderbilt following. Cold weather has greatly stimulated the demand for coal. Van Embergh bought Jersey heavily. Insiders are bullish on Lackawanna. Union Pacific broke on continued selling, presumably for Boston account. It is reported that a bill will be presented in Congress for a thorough investigation of the company. The company's November earnings increased $97,000. Gould's Southwestern declined on the reported reduction in freight rates. Texas Pacific freely offered, presumably for Wormsdorffer interests. The traders hammered Kansas and Missouri, but there was good buying. It is thought Missouri Pacific. The earnings of the Missouri Pacific and its Southwestern connections the fourth week of November increased $38,000. Earnings of the Richmond-Danville system for the week ending November 24 increased $[illegible]. The gross earnings of the St. Paul and Duluth for the three months ending October 31 increased $[illegible]. Germans were selling Western Union heavily at the close.

Higher prices are predicted for North Pacific and Northern Continental. An artificial advance is expected in Wabash preferred. Some good buying of Denver is reported. The feeling is somewhat mixed, but apparently more bullish. Bears are not so discouraging. The reduction on the Southwesterns is misunderstood. Many think the change made was not very important. It is said that Vanderbilt and Gould have been putting their heads together on the Northwest situation and important developments in some quarters are expected. It is thought Vanderbilt may have bought the control of Omaha. If the present board would agree to resign he might lease the road to the Northwestern. There is a better feeling on Reading Railroad; the earnings are reported large. Rumors prevail that a reduction of dividends is contemplated on Union Pacific. It is understood that the stock sold at 99¼ last night.

The Markets.

FORENOON SESSION.

Flour—Receipts 2,894 brls. Market dead dull and no demand even at the decline of 5 to 10c which took place all around; the feeling was very weak and the market generally in a most unsatisfactory and discouraging condition. The movement to-day was exceedingly light, buyers being unusually scarce. Quotations are as follows: Extra fancy $4 85@5 00; fancy $4 60@4 70; choice $4 40@4 60; family $3 65@4 85; xxx $3 30@3 45; xx $2 90@3 00; x $2 80@2 85; superfine $2 70@2 75; fine $2 50@2 55; favorite brands 25c higher; patents $5 50@6.

Buckwheat Flour—Quiet and slow; New York jobs $8; Wisconsin $7 50, and old $7.

Cornmeal—Slow at $2 50@2 55 on orders delivered; grits, pearl meal and hominy at $4 25@4 60.

Rye Flour—Steady and held firm. Supply rather light at $3 75@4.

Wheat—Receipts 766 sks, 31,500 bu. Higher. Firmness was quite prominent in the market, for, though Liverpool cables were depressing, yet other markets of this country were better, and with rainy weather and the prospects of a falling off in receipts from bad country roads, a stiff tone asserted itself and the close was ¼c up for December and year and ⅛c better for January, February and May than at close of yesterday. The cash market was firm, though quiet, a little livelier movement taking place in No. 2 red, but business light otherwise. No. 2 Mediterranean declined a fraction, but all else were better in price. No. 2 red cash 94⅝@94¾ regular; year, 94¾@95; January, 96⅜@96⅞; February, 98⅜@98⅞; March, $1 00½ bid; April, $1 01¾ bid; May, $1 00¼; No. 3 red, 88¾@89 regular; No. 4, 84 in C.; rejected, 80 in St. L., 89@81 in D.; No grade, 73 regular; No. 2 Mediterranean, 97@97¼ this, and 98 E. side; No. 3 do, 93@93¼ in C.; 94 bid E side.

Corn—Receipts 2,118 sks, 119,350 bu. Higher prices came into the field to-day, as a consequence of the rainy and gloomy weather, but the feeling in the option market remained greatly unsettled, and there was no scare at the prospects on the part of the bears, who stood prepared to hammer the market down if they got half a show. After a fluctuating course all through the session prices finally closed at advances of ⅛@⅜ for year, ⅜ for June, ¼ for February and ⅜@½ for May over yesterday's close. For cash grades there was a better demand all along the line, even No. 2 meeting fair sale, though going mainly to shorts, while the lower qualities were taken for shipment and local consumption. No. 2 mixed cash 51¼@51⅜ regular; year 51⅛ to 51⅝, closing at 51½; January 49⅜ to 49⅞, closing at 49¾; February 49¼@⅜ to 49½; March 50⅛ bid; May 51⅜ to 51½@⅝; No. 2 white mixed 51¼ regular; rejected do 44@44⅜ regular; new do 45¾ this side; new mixed 45⅜@45⅜ this side and 45½@45⅞ E. side; rejected 44½@44⅛ regular; no grade 40 in St. L., 36 bid E. side.

Oats—Receipts 330 sacks, 9,000 bushels. Buoyancy marked this market, and there was a decided advance in value. Shorts were buying freely, especially of the near-by options, besides a straight-out purchasing inquiry from other parties, a confident tone prevailing all through on the assumption that prices were low enough and there should be an advance. The close was 1⅛c higher year, ⅛c for January and ½ for May. Offerings of cash grades were small, as receipts were light and the stock down low, but everything on sale was quickly taken for local feeding to fill orders. No. 2 cash 36¾ in St. L., 36 bid regular, 37 for D., 37¼ for C.; year 35⅞ to 36⅛; January 34⅞ to 35, and 35⅛ bid later; February 35 bid; May 36 to 36⅛; rejected 36 in C., 36¼ in St. L.

Rye—Receipts 33 sks, 1,650 bu. An unchanged market, except that probably it was duller than it has been. The only sale was of rejected at 52; No. 2 was held at 56, without a bid for it.

Barley—Receipts 135 sks, 11,000 bu. Almost nominal, so dull was it, hardly a sale being made. We quote: Rejected 40@50; No. 2 50@60; prime to strictly 60@65; choice 70@75; fancy 80@85.

Hay—Receipts 382 tons. The rain of this forenoon about knocked business in the head, preventing buyers from visiting the yards or hauling, but the tone of the market was firm and a good inquiry was noticeable. This side—Prairie $10 for choice; mixed $11; timothy $14 50@16; East track—Mixed $11@12; timothy $13@15 50.

Millfeed—Eastern buyers were barred out by the recent advance in freights, and the Southern order demand was small, so that business was light. Sacked bran 62@63¼ E. track; bulk 50 this side, 52 E. track.

Provisions—Receipts 173,000 lbs meats, 730 lbs lard. There was really no change in value, but the feeling was a firm one and prices held up well. Only a light business was transacted. A little mess pork sold early at $17 35@37½ spot, and January $17 50; February salable at $17 55. Round lots of prime steam lard worth $10 60 this and 10.65 E. side, but 10½ was the best bid from refiners. Dry salt shoulders sold at 6⅝@7¼ boxed, 6¾ loose, long clear 8⅞@9 boxed, 9¼ loose, clear ribs at 9¼ boxed and loose, short clear at 9½ boxed, 9.70 loose; the loose was on cash orders. Packed bacon short clear sold at 11.35; shoulders quotable at 9, long clear at 10¾, clear ribs at 11. Hams 14½@16½. Tallow 7⅛ for prime to strictly prime in oil bris; medium and falling off lots in irregular pkgs 7@7¼; grease tallow 6¾. Breakfast bacon 14½@15½. Grease 5@5½ for brown, 6@7c yellow, 7½@8¼c for white. Beef—Extra mess $12@16 per br, according to brand; $7 50@8 50 per half brl; dried 12@½c; strictly choice 15c per pound. Fresh smoked tongues $4 50 @5 per doz. Salt—Domestic $1 10@1 20 per brl. Ground alum $1 15 per sack for round lots, $1 20@1 25 in a small way.

Highwines—Local market unchanged and steady at $1 16; movement fairly active, sales amounting to 196 brls; Cincinnati firm at $1 15; Chicago ——; Peoria firm at $1 15.

Lead very dull, about to the verge of deadness, refined offered at $4 25 and hard at $4 20, but with no buyers at these rates, the only bid being $4 12½ for hard. Spelter entirely nominal.

Grass seeds—But little offering and no trading done, prices, however, steady. German and common millet and Hungarian in good request, otherwise market unchanged. We quote: Prime seed at $1 50@1 55 for timothy, 55@65 for red top, $5 25@5 40 clover, 80@90 German millet, common do 45@50, Hungarian 50@55.

Flax seed—Slow at $1 12.

Hemp Seed—Quiet and unchanged at $1 20@1 22.

CATTLE—Trading was dead dull this morning. Buyers were poorly represented, and there being no cattle to buy, the volume of business transacted was exceedingly light. The feeling was weak and the prices lower to sell. Yesterday afternoon a few transfers were made to speculators and interior shippers at figures ranging from $2 60 @3 10 for native cows and $4 50 for steers; there was also 84 head of native stock steers which brought $3 37½. Quotations to-day may be considered nominal and weak at the following:

HOGS—The market this morning, owing to more encouraging reports from other points and the light run—which was, however, increased towards noon—exhibited more strength, and, although prices paid for packing and butchering grades could be quoted no higher, they were decidedly stronger. The feeling was firmer and the market showed less weakness than heretofore. Light hogs, however, were an exception, this description being reported weak and downward in tendency. There was no demand to speak of, Eastern markets being fully supplied, and it was the opinion that sales would have to be made at lower figures than prevailed yesterday. As was stated above packing and butcher hogs of good quality showed more 'backbone,' and we note sales to the former at a range from $6 00@6 40, the outside figure being for 300 lbs hogs, butchers paid $6 10@6 45. Medium hogs showed a little less firmness and were inclined to be weak. Prices at 11 a. m. can be quoted as follows $5 65@5 80 for ligt to good Yorkers; $6@6 20 for mixed packing, extra do $6 20@6 25, butchers $6 20@6 30, and extra $6 40@6 50.

ALONG THE WHARVES.

Business along the wharves fairly boomed to-day.

The river at this point still continues to go down.

The Alex. Kendall, from Clarksville, was among the day's arrivals.

The Emma C. Elliott cleared for Grand Tower this afternoon with a fair load.

The Bald Eagle was in and out to-day in the Alton run well supplied both ways.

The Belle of Memphis cleared for Vicksburg at 4 o'clock this afternoon with 600 tons.

The Alton Harbor Company have expended $5,000 in the improvement of Alton harbor.

Capt. Thorwegan's new Helena starts on her maiden trip to New Orleans to-morrow evening.

The My Choice, of the barge line, started for New Orleans to-day with a fleet of loaded barges.

The Marine Engineers' Association met at 2 o'clock this afternoon, at its rooms, 411 N. Third street.

Officer Moberly, one of Capt. Frangel's best men, is now doing coast duty north of Washington avenue.

Capt. La Mont's Dora, of the Swartz Line, came in from Clarksville this morning with a loaded barge, and started back at 4 p. m.

Old steamboat-men predict an open river and winter, but a very cold spell between the 15th of February and the first of the following month.

The Marine Journal, Capt. Frank Baker, editor, Cincinnati, improves with every issue. It is the only paper in the world devoted exclusively to steamboatmen. Capt. Baker has correspondents at every river port in America. The Journal is issued every Thursday morning, and is worthy of the great patronage that has been accorded it.

Capt. Frank Baker's Marine Journal, Cincinnati, has the following newsy items: "Since the commencement of work on August 15th the snagboat De Russey has moved a total of 858 snags and breaks, 10 drift piles, and cut 1,505 trees between St. Louis and Cairo. The corn in the bends below Cairo is being largely purchased by agents of St. Louis, Chicago and Eastern parties, and will be diverted from its usual Southern channel this season."

The Pittsburg Dispatch is responsible for the following: "It is said that Josh Billings, the man who is notorious for having made $250,000 out of his bad spelling, at one time in his life ran a steamboat from Gallipolis to Charleston, on the Kanawha. It was a company boat, and the company, which was composed of New Yorkers, became bankrupt. This is supposed to have been back in the forties. Billings' right name is Henry W. Shaw. The POST-DISPATCH knows that Josh Billings at one time in the forties lived in North St. Louis, on Broadway near Bremen avenue, and kept a small book and news stand."

ARTHUR has caught on to a buoyant plank or two and is drifting away from the wreck.

A WASHINGTON correspondent says that the House of Representatives when it assembled yesterday resembled a Lodge of Sorrow.

THE President wants a civil service reform bill passed. It will be too late to help him, but it may be in time to bother his Democratic successor.

SOLO by ARTHUR: "I am a civil service reformer." Chorus of Congressmen: "We are civil service reformers; we always were civil service reformers!"

THE Fifth Regiment of Maryland—the pride of Baltimore—scored a casualty yesterday. A member of the regiment, in full uniform, blew out his brains in a bagnio.

THERE is a growing conviction that the attempt of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue to be a bigger man than the Secretary of the Treasury ought to be discouraged.

THE President's message was printed in the regular edition of the POST-DISPATCH yesterday in excellent shape. The first telegraphic pages were not received by us until 1 o'clock. We print a newspaper.

MR. RANDALL was hailed as "Thane of Cawdor" and Speaker by his Democratic colleagues yesterday in the House. But the weird sisters have referred to a man named CARLISLE.

MR. HERBERT, of Alabama, is anxious to prohibit political assessments. One would think that HUBBELL would be the strongest opponent of this evil, as he has suffered the most seriously from it.

THERE seems to be a disposition on the part of Congressmen to bring in Civil Service Reform bills all at once. The Congressman who hasn't a little Civil Service Reform bill in his pocket must feel lonesome.

SOME people are real quick about learning things. A month or so ago Postmaster-General HOWE declared that a reduction of letter postage to two cents was inadvisable, but the President has found out since then that it is just the thing we want.

WE observe that the Westliche Post finds little to commend in the President's Message. If our contemporary was in love with the man who wrote it, we have reason to believe that it would be able to point out some merit in the inoffensive document.

IF some of the old Romans who used to hang around the Flavium Amphitheater in the sanguinary days of CALIGULA had dropped in at Moberly yesterday they would have concluded most likely that Civilization had sprained her hip in working to the westward.

THE lecture of "Gath" (MR. GEO. ALFRED TOWNSEND) at Memorial Hall this evening will be an intellectual treat. People who desire to be illuminated with new thoughts will find that an hour's talk from the brilliant "Gath" will give them a renewed interest in human affairs.

PRESIDENT ARTHUR has made many good suggestions, and among them the suggestion that every appropriation should pass on its own merits. If his recommendation is adopted, and the river and harbor appropriation is divided up, it will save this country about two hundred millions of dollars in the next ten years.

DAKOTA is knocking for admission into the Union as a State. If we could relegate Nevada or Oregon, or some one of the pocket boroughs which are owned by millionaire Senators, back again to their pristine condition, we might give Dakota a trial; but recent experience with small Western States is not conducive to a repetition of the experiment.

A COMPANY of national philanthropists have appeared before Congress on the first day of the session with a proposition to build a railroad through the Yellowstone National Park, with a modest maximum of seven cents per mile for fares and corresponding freight rates. The modesty which refuses to ask for a subsidy in addition deserves to be rewarded by a free gift of the park.

THE Supreme Court of this State has spoken a timely word upon the evils of the deposition mill. It says: "The oppression and annoyance to which witnesses and suitors who may be summoned as witnesses may be subjected under the statutes which confer such powers upon Notaries and Justices of the Peace is a matter for the consideration of the Legislature." We trust the Legislature will take note of this.

WE printed on Saturday a little communication from an intemperate temperance advocate in which the POST-DISPATCH was referred to as a "champion of the saloonists." It is sad to note the facility with which well-intentioned people fall into errors of this class. We do not happen to favor the doctrine of Prohibition because we regard it as highly impracticable and undemocratic; ergo, we are a champion of saloonists. Now, the POST-DISPATCH is a believer in temperance in all things. It would be pleased to see the saloon influence curtailed, the liquor traffic regulated, and the existing laws enforced, but Prohibition is fanaticism, and therefore powerless to accomplish the good work so earnestly sought for by the social reformers. We want the proposition submitted to the people of Missouri so that it can be voted down and disposed of.

TO-DAY a Grand Jury composed of twelve worthy and reputable citizens of the City of St. Louis, charged with the duty of inquiring into crimes, reported officially to the Criminal Court that there was no probable cause upon which to base an indictment against JOHN A. COCKERILL. Mr. COCKERILL stood charged before the Court of Criminal Correction with the killing of A. W. SLAYBACK in the office of the POST-DISPATCH on the 13th day of October last. A more complete vindication, under the circumstances, could hardly be asked. This Grand Jury heard and weighed for the first time the testimony in the case. It decided that the act of Mr. COCKERILL was justifiable. Complaint is made in some malignant quarters that this Grand Jury conducted its investigations with too much liberality—in other words, permitted witnesses to appear before them who, in the very common language of people not versed in law, were not State's witnesses. The fact that, so far as a Grand Jury is concerned, there are no witnesses for either the prosecution or defense—all persons having knowledge being competent to testify if the Jury so elect—may serve to allay the apprehension in some directions that the interests of society have been neglected in not forcing a case to trial which could only have one result—the acquittal of the accused. It is the business of Grand Juries to find indictments only when there is probable cause and when a conviction can be possibly wrought. It is not a part of the Jury's duty to provide for costly trials in order to gratify personal malice or afford public entertainment.

FORCIBLE FIGURES.

Paradoxical as it may appear, we believe the Republicans of Missouri have done remarkably well in spite of the pluralities of over 70,000 votes just cast against them.

The Democrats were united. They had good candidates. A splendid organizer stood at the head of their State Committee. Their "machine" was worked with the utmost vigor. The very best speakers of the State, like Senator VEST, COCKRELL, CHARLES P. JOHNSON, JOHN T. PHILLIPS and others, stumped the State and made a stirring, active canvass. The Republicans, on the other hand, were hopelessly divided fighting themselves. The regular organization, led by CHAUNCEY I. FILLEY, was opposed to the ticket put up by the "bolters." Nobody advocated or cared for it. The Republican "machine" throughout the State wanted its overwhelming defeat to teach a lesson to the "bolters." There was practically no canvass or organization, and the so-called State Committee was composed of utter nincompoops and noodles.

Yet in spite of all this, the Republicans polled over 125,000 votes. Judge WAGNER received as many as 128,239.

We consider this, under the circumstances, an astonishingly large vote, showing the growing strength of the opposition to Democracy in Missouri.

In 1876 HAYES received 145,029 votes. In 1880 GARFIELD had 153,567 votes. In 1882, with certain disaster staring them in the face, and a desperate internecine struggle within their own ranks, they polled, practically, 161,646 votes, for RICE, the Filley-Greenback candidate, received 33,407, and everybody knew that RICE was a life-long "black" Republican.

If the Republicans and so-called Greenbackers had been united they could have given the Democrats a close race, for the Republican stay-at-home vote must, under the circumstances, have been enormously large.

It is interesting to learn from the official figures that there are still 33,000 voters in Missouri who call themselves Greenbackers—more than in any State of the Union. Also that Judge SHERWOOD received 10,000 votes less than HANCOCK, and over 15,000 votes less than TILDEN. Also that the total vote cast by all parties is only 360,266—110,406, or nearly 33 per cent, less than the vote of Indiana in 1880—and Indiana has a smaller population than Missouri.

THE MESSAGE.

It may be objected to the President's Message as a matter of taste that it dwells too much on the strain "I told you so a year ago, but you would not listen to me." As a matter of fact, the annual message of last year did contain a great many most wise and prudent counsels, none of which were heeded. But it has been the custom of the President from time immemorial to fill his message with good advice, very much after the manner of a kind father whose son is going off to college, and it has been the custom of Congress to pay no attention to the advice. A President's message is very much like a political platform, which has fulfilled its mission when it has been published, but which is not ordinarily held to be binding on anybody.

Just at present, however, Congress has received a most lively reminder from the voters that they would like to have some attention paid occasionally to their needs and their wishes, and there is a prospect that the suggestions and recommendations of the message will be taken and acted on seriously. Congress at the last session refused to reduce taxation, but undertook to dispose of the surplus by increasing the expenses. The opposite course must now be followed: the expenses must be reduced, and taxation must be regulated by the needs of the Government.

What we may expect to see accomplished, unless the shortness of the session prevents it, is a repeal of many of the internal revenue taxes and a reduction of those that remain, the reduction of the appropriation bill to more satisfactory dimensions, the passage of a civil service reform bill, and the reduction of letter postage to two cents. We do not expect to see any satisfactory amendment of the tariff, because the subject is so intricate, the interests involved are so complicated and the views and opinions of Congress are so diverse that it will be impossible for Congress to agree upon any tariff policy. There is, moreover, the circumstance to be noted that, as a new Congress has already been chosen, of which one-half are new members, it would be better to leave to their judgment a decision which the present Congress is unfitted to make.

The tone of the President's message and the manner in which it is received give evidence that the recent elections have produced deep and unusual impression, and that the effect will be wholly beneficial. There is a very general opinion that members of Congress will be much more careful about their votes and that parties will be much more careful about their acts, and that for the first time in many years legislation will be controlled by considerations of public welfare. With such agreeable reflections, we wish Congress success in carrying out the recommendations of the message, and we are quite sure that no one will be prevented by party jealousy from giving them credit if they fairly deserve it by their management of the great interests at stake during the session.

IMPROVED HIGHWAYS.

There is much talk about improved highways in some of our Missouri counties where there is plenty of stone conveniently accessible for macadamizing the common roads. Some facts stated in a recent report of the Turnpike Commissioner of Bourbon county, Kentucky, may prove interesting in this connection. That county, it seems, has within its area of but little over 300 square miles, forty-eight graded, bridged and macadamized roads whose aggregate length is 221 miles over these roads 4,000 pounds is an ordinary load for a two-horse wagon any day of the year, regardless of season or weather. And instead of taxing property or people to keep these roads in repair, the county actually derives a revenue from them. First and last the County Court has paid for them $204,609, and received from them $33,229 80. One of them which was constructed as far back as 1835 has repaid the county treasury in cash dividends 86½ per cent of the original county subscription. Another constructed in 1859 has paid back 80 per cent.

Years ago the Bourbon County Court pledged a county subscription of $1,000 per mile to the stock of every chartered company that would make a first-class macadamized road anywhere in the county, under a charter permitting the company to erect toll-gates and collect tolls at the rate of one cent a mile for a horseman, two cents a mile for a horse and buggy, and four cents a mile for a two-horse wagon. This county subscription amounting to about one-third of the cost per mile of grading, macadamizing and bridging in that country, the land-owners living along the various county roads have organized the companies, subscribed the other two-thirds of the stock and built 221 miles of road at a total cost of about $690,000. The land-owners say that the increased value of their lands and products has more than reimbursed them for their subscriptions and for the taxes they have had to pay on account of the county's subscriptions. The roads and bridges are kept in repair and small dividends paid besides to the stockholders from the toll-gate receipts, the only road tax that county now has. Thus the roads are paid for by those who use them, those paying most who use them most.

The experiment has been a great economic success. While carrying out this turnpike policy Bourbon county has subscribed for some $750,000 of railroad stock, most of which became valueless on her hands, but we understand that she has paid off nearly all of her bonds without a day's default on principal or interest, and still has kept her rate of taxation below the limit permitted to our counties by the present Constitution of Missouri. Those who are demanding that our State Constitution shall be amended so as to widen the limit of local taxation and indebtedness plead the great want of improved highways as one of the reasons for their demand. The example of a number of counties in the older States proves that first-class highways can be provided without any serious increase of county taxation or indebtedness.

In a level, unfenced country the gate-keepers on a toll road would starve of course. But a number of Missouri counties that have the metal for macadamizing and the wealth to carry out the Bourbon county plan are already sufficiently fenced up to make a toll road pay. There is no place in this State where good land along a smooth macadamized highway would remain long unfenced.

THE old hobby of the Centralizationists—a Government Telegraph—finds a lodgment in Postmaster-General HOWE's report. He wants the Government to take possession of all the telegraph lines and furnish the public with cheap rates. This would largely increase the power and patronage of the Administration. The party in power would have the appointment of 25,000 more employes and such control of the telegraphic service as would make a political change almost impossible. The Government has the same right to go into the express business that it has to monopolize the telegraphic service. We are in favor of drawing the line at the transportation of the mails, the Star Routes included. If the Government had charge of the telegraphs the jobbers would cobweb the land with wires. They would not be content without at least a line from the Dry Tartugas to the upper end of Alaska.

WHEN the lovely LANGTRY had safely passed the ordeal of New York inspection it was generally felt that unless her success was ratified by the approval of Boston it were better for her to have stayed at home. Now a Boston newspaper man has seen her and his report upon her beauty is as follows:

Her eyes are steel gray in color, and are by no means sparkling or capable of variety of expression. Her mouth is large and not particularly shapely, while her lips do not follow the line of beauty in their forms. Her nose is long, ungraceful in its lines, and out of proportion to the length of her face. Her chin is full and heavy, as is the whole lower part of her face. Her hands are large, though not badly formed, but her wrists are ugly, and her arm, from the wrist to the elbow, is anything but the ideal of physical beauty. From the elbow to the shoulder it is thin in proportion to the fullness of her figure. Her feet are large and not well-shaped. Her legs are thin and far from abundant in lines of grace, and her knees protrude.

Mrs. LANGTRY made a great mistake in not making her first appearance in Boston in a gray waterproof, a pair of "goloshes" and spectacles. In this guise does Venus appear to the Bostonian Paris when he awards her the prize of beauty on the wind-swept Beacon Hill.

THE HON. JOHN O'NEILL, who has recently returned from a trip to Monterey, says that he gained more knowledge of the issues involved in the existence of the Indian Territory by riding through the territory in a railroad car twice than he could have gained by reading a whole library of books about it. The members of BURROWES' Investigating Committee report that their visit to the Mississippi River was equally full of improvement and advantage. There can be no doubt that it is to the interest of this country to have its legislators acquainted with the different parts of the country for which they legislate. The French government has recently passed a law conferring on the members of its Chamber of Deputies the privilege of free transportation over all the railroads of the country, and there is reason to believe that such a move would be of great value to this country if it could be introduced.

THE battle royal in the streets of Moberly between a brotherhood of Kansas Bible agents and the police and citizens of the Missouri town resulted more fortunately than is wont to be the case in such encounters, the whole of the Kansas band being shot down without any loss of life on the part of the citizens. In referring to this little episode it is well to bear in mind that though it happened on Missouri soil the only share Missouri had in it was in siding with law and order, and facing three armed desperadoes with a courage which decided the fight. The desperadoes were not Missourians, but Kansas boys, who, in the intervals of horse stealing and shooting marshals and deputy sheriffs, passed their time in circulating Bibles. They were born in Illinois, a State which seems to be quite generally selected by desperadoes as a good place to be born in.

A DISPATCH says that Mrs. LANGTRY was received in Boston last evening by a small audience, and that, small as it was, the opinion prevailed that there were twenty women present who excelled her in pulchritude. And it must be borne in mind that in Boston the ladies run to facial angles and intellectual noses.

A NEWSPAPER man at Nashville sent us a telegram this morning announcing: "QUANTRELL, the guerrilla, not dead; living in Tennessee. Want particulars?" We did not send for the details. We happen to know that Q. is curled up in a cemetery at Louisville, Ky., and the man who killed him is sleeping near by.

A Reflection.

ST. LOUIS, December 4.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

It has been remarked by a European historian of note that American civilization is largely a reflection of European. In view of the many attempts recently made attempting to establish morality by coercive legal measures (temperance and Sunday laws, etc.), might it not be proper to say that at present we are reflecting the civilization of mediæval Europe? But God bless and speed the arrogance of Ignorance and Fanaticism, for, it it lasts long enough, it may yet produce a State really and totally independent of ecclesiastical ideas, and a school whose sole end and aim is the "production of a free citizen in a free State."

JOHN SHARP.

Trust the People.

From the St. Joseph Herald.

The St. Louis POST-DISPATCH, an uncompromising opponent of prohibition, comes out squarely in favor of submitting the matter to the people and predicts that if it is done the question will be voted down by a majority of 100,000. It expresses the opinion that if the proposed amendment is submitted to the people they will vote it down forever, whereas, if it is not done, certain fanatics over the State will keep on agitating the matter and make it a continual bone of contention. The POST-DISPATCH claims that the people can always be trusted, and that it is better to let them decide a question than to attempt to keep it from them in any manner.

CRIMINAL COURT.

Partial Report of the November Grand Jury to Judge Laughlin.

Various Matters Disposed of Before That Tribunal To-Day.

At noon to-day the November grand jury returned into the Criminal Court and made a partial report of the work accomplished during the session, which includes the months of November and December. The November body is composed of the following gentlemen: F. E. Udell, foreman; George B. Thomson, D. B. Gould, C. R. Goodin, Jos. A. Wherry, E. S. Douglass, Thos. S. Noonan, Frank A. Lane, Chas. L. Buschman, W. H. Calvert, Fred F. Rosier and Warren Souther.

Mr. T. B. Udell handed the following ignored bills to Judge Laughlin:

Robert Harper, grand larceny; not a true bill, but probable cause.

Dina Rotteyman, grand larceny; not a true bill, but probable cause.

Mary Hazelman, grand larceny; not a true bill, but probable cause.

Thomas Woudell, manslaughter in the second degree; not a true bill, but probable cause.

Mollie Watson alias Mollie Kelly, grand larceny; not a true bill, but probable cause.

Stephen Seeley, obtaining money under false pretenses, not a true bill but probable cause.

William P. Anderson, embezzlement not a true bill.

Two cases, Kate Meyer assault to do great bodily harm, not a true bill; but probable cause.

John A. Cockerill, murder in the second degree, not a true bill.

Each of these ignored bills were signed by F. D. Udell, foreman. A number of indictments were also returned, after which the jury returned to its labors again.

Messrs. J. J. McBride and C. O. Bishop, attorneys for John Hays, applied to Judge Laughlin in the Criminal Court for a stay of execution in the case. Hays shot and killed Philip A. Muller in the latter's saloon on the corner of Grand and Kossuth avenues, in August, 1881, and was tried and convicted of murder in the first degree in the Criminal Court. A few weeks ago he was sentenced to be hanged on December 29. An appeal was granted, but the date of execution intervened between the trial and the hearing of the appeal. To avoid this annoying difficulty the stay of execution was applied for and granted until the case is heard in the Appellate Court.

On motion of Mr. L. D. Seward Mr. H. M. Wilcox was to-day enrolled to practice in the Criminal Court.

The sentence of A. J. Smith, convicted of assault with intent to kill, was commuted to a fine of $100 and costs, the minimum punishment, in view of many extenuating circumstances.

To-day Mr. M. J. Sullivan, the newly appointed Assistant Circuit Attorney, vice E. A. Noonan, resigned, presented his commission to Judge Laughlin in the Criminal Court, and took the oath of office. Mr. Sullivan will enter on the duties of the office without delay.

Judge Laughlin stated to the bar that he did not expect to hold court more than a day or two more, as matters were now in shape to turn over to his successor, Judge Van Wagoner, who will take the bench next Monday.

NOT THIS EVENING.

Wednesday Evening the Freight Bureau will Organize.

Mr. Dwight Tredway Explains the Public Nature of the Invitation.

The change of date for the organization of the Freight Bureau is a fact which the Executive Committee wish to impress specially upon the subscribers. The meeting will take place, not this evening, but Wednesday evening, at 8 o'clock, at the St. Louis Club. Subscribers will govern themselves accordingly without further notice. The Wednesday meeting is, of course, intended for subscribers only, but the committee hope that those who have not yet subscribed and who intend doing so will come to the meeting and put their names on the list. Accordingly all who wish to become members are cordially invited to be present Wednesday at 8 o'clock p. m. at the St. Louis Club. There are now eighty-two subscribers on the list who have sent in written requests to have their names added. The committee have received verbal assurances which increase the list very nearly to the requisite hundred. Of course the organization will now be proceeded with, as the necessary funds are secured, but the committee feel that the business interests of St. Louis should be more largely represented in the bureau. They wish attention called to the fact that it is not money that the enterprise needs, but it must be backed up by the combined business influence of this city if it is to succeed. The eighty-two firms now on the list could as easily subscribe $500 or a thousand dollars a piece, but the committee would much sooner have four hundred subscribers who would pay $25 each than ten who would pay $1,000. This is a fact which they wish impressed upon the business community of St. Louis. Every firm, corporation or capitalist who is interested directly or indirectly in the prosperity of the city should be in the bureau, and those who have not yet subscribed it is hoped will be present Wednesday evening and put down their names. A membership of a hundred is now fully assured. The expenses will be not more than $10,000 a year. Every additional member who comes in over the necessary hundred will lessen the subscription for himself and for the others and add to the strength and effectiveness of the bureau.

The committee are continually receiving the most encouraging letters from all sources. The following from Mr. A. S. Patterson, Secretary and Treasurer of the St. Louis Beef Canning Company, is a fair sample of the support which the enterprise is receiving at the hands of the business men.

ST. LOUIS BEEF CANNING COMPANY,
NATIONAL STOCK YARDS, December 4, 1882.

Jas. Richardson, Esq.:

DEAR SIR—Your circular in relation to the organization of said subscriptions to the Freight Bureau was duly received, but I do not find any subscription blank enclosed, and take this means of notifying you of our desire to become subscribers to that organization. In discussing this matter with some of our stock commission firms I learn with surprise that the live stock interests apparently have not been considered in this matter and no invitations have been sent to them to become subscribers thereto. No doubt this has been an oversight, but it appears to me that it is too important an interest and forms too large a part of the business of St. Louis to be unrepresented in a movement so important and vital to the welfare of St. Louis as the organization and maintenance of this "Freight Bureau." The live stock transported across the St. Louis bridge stands second only to one other article or commodity, the first being coal, which is west-bound, and of course all the live stock which is brought east over the bridge is hauled through the State of Missouri for a greater or less distance, forming a large portion of the freight handled by her roads, and contributing in the same measure to the support of those roads and the prosperity of the State. There are at least two commission houses at these yards whose freight bills amount to about $16,000 per month each. Their business, which is entirely cash, and passes through the St. Louis banks, amounts for each house to not less than $9,000,000 or $10,000,000 per annum. There are a number of other firms of almost equal importance, and it is safe to say that the aggregate of the stock yard business, as represented in dollars and cents, which passes through the St. Louis banks, will not fall short of $100,000,000 to $150,000,000 per annum. Then there are packing houses here—Messrs. Francis Whittaker & Sons, East St. Louis Packing and Provision Company and our own house. Doubtless the former two of these concerns were invited to participate in this movement as we were, so it is not necessary to make any reference to the magnitude of their business. Suffice it to say that we are all St. Louis people; that our interests are identical and involved in those of St. Louis, and as she retrogrades or advances, falls or prospers, we must do likewise. We draw our supplies and our employes almost entirely from within the limits of the city of St. Louis, and the money spent for supplies and paid out for labor is poured into the lap of St. Louis. Upon recommending some of the representatives of the commission houses to become subscribers to the bureau, I learned with a little surprise that they do not feel like intruding themselves where they have not been invited, but where they feel that the importance of their business to St. Louis and the advantages to be gained by them from such a connection entitle them to be.

* * * * * * * *

If any apology be needed for addressing you in this way I pray you accept it on the ground that I desire to see so important a measure as you have undertaken succeed to the uttermost. Wishing you and your coadjutors the largest measure of success in this movement, which I fully believe you will attain, I remain, etc.,

A. S. PATTERSON.

In speaking of Mr. Patterson's letter, Dwight Tredway remarked:

"This is not the first time that the committee has heard of firms which have not subscribed because they were not invited, and yet I can not imagine how we could make the invitation more complete or more public than we did. We sent out a number of circulars to a great many firms, but there were a great many more that we did not send to; some because we did not believe it was necessary, as we knew that they were in sympathy with us; others because their names were not suggested. In order to cover all these cases, however, we again and again caused the announcement to be made in the public press that this was an open matter and that we heartily and cordially invited every firm and every man in this city, who felt that their or his business was interested in a solution of the St. Louis freight problem, to come forward and join hands with us. We are not drawing a line anywhere. We want the business community to come in with us. We hope our position will not be misunderstood. Nobody can write out a list which would contain all the invitations that ought to be sent out. We must rely on the papers to let the people know what is going on, and to invite them to come with us. We are ready to send circulars to every address that anybody may suggest to us. We will do it gladly. But that ought not to be necessary. Those who are interested should understand that this is a public measure relying on the public for its support and its effectiveness, and they should come in on their own motion. I will assure every subscriber a cordial welcome."

THE WACKERLE CASE.

Appeal Taken by the Insurance Company to the Supreme Court.

The Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York this morning filed a supersedeas bond in the United States Circuit Court taking an appeal of the widow Wackerle's sensational identity case to the Supreme Court of the United States. This action was altogether unexpected and it is contrary to the published announcement of the company to the effect that the case would not be contested any further, and that the verdict of the jury in favor of the widow for $6,000 would be satisfied at once. The widow's counsel, A. R. Taylor is not satisfied that the company now has the right of appeal. The time for perfecting an appeal lapsed with the final session of court for the term. That, however, is a question for the Supreme Court to decide. Some steps were about to be taken to enforce payment of the judgment when the company came in with its supersedeas bond, which, of course, has the effect of staying execution.

BELLEVILLE.

Yesterday all the successful candidates of the recent election assumed their positions.

After the meeting of the City Council the members and many of their friends repaired, on invitation of the Hon. J. W. Underwood, to Mrs. Aberer's restaurant and spent a pleasant evening.

At a meeting of the City Council held last night, Ernest Smalley and Fritz Webber were appointed policemen, and James M. Hay, one of the ablest attorneys of the Belleville bar, was appointed City Attorney to fill the vacancy occasioned by the elevation of W. J. Underwood to the County Judgeship.

The ball given by the O. C. Circle, of Belleville, was well attended. The Bavarian band was under the leadership of Prof. Mauser. The dancing commenced at 9 p. m. The grand march was led by John Nitchey and Miss Augusta Tiemann. Among those present were noticed Miss Lena and Miss Helena P. Abend, Meta Hemsick, Louisa Greiser, Anna Riess, Bertha and Amelia Bartel, Sophia La Croux, Alice Rentchler, Amelia and Loui Kaiser, Bertha Becker, Stella Hecker, Clara Wangelin, Nellie Pierce, Gertie Voelker, Augusta Schiller, Ollie Klippel, Emma Mans, Johanna Lerey, Adeline Weber, Clara Baurmann, Clara Aber, May Flushbein, Julia Schoup, and Bertha Teckert. The following were the gentlemen attending: Grant Underwood, Sam Croatch, Eugene Padfield, Warren Fleming, Tom Ogle, J. Schiller, M. J. Waugh, Carl Carrington, Oscar and Dick Aber, F. J. Longton, of St. Louis, P. J. Peckham, of Chicago, John Day, Fred Reis, George Grey, O. N. Park, Harry Padfield and many others.

'CHANGE CULLINGS.

Present Status of the November Corn Deal.

Move Against the Bucket Shops—Notes, Etc.

St. Louis option traders are getting as roughly abused from abroad over the default and squealing on the November corn deal, as they did when they made the same kick in the June wheat "corner." One case is cited where parties in other markets who are long December oats here have ordered their St. Louis broker to sell them out as fast as he can make settlements with the parties of whom he has the oats bought. They have these oats purchased at from 29½ cents up to 33½ cents, and now they are worth 36 cents. They write that they believe oats will be worth 40 cents in Chicago and St. Louis, but rather than take any chances of going through what the November corn longs are now going through these parties would rather get out of their deals at a small profit, "and then," they say, "we have done with trading in your market." The parties short November corn and who are still holding out present the same obstinate front and refusal to accept the longs' terms that they did when the month ended. The longs are making ready for arbitration, and as soon as a committee is appointed that suits both sides the case will be proceeded with. Gen. Grier, the principal long, claims that Charles F. Orthwein, the first vice president, is directly interested in the deal, as Orthwein Bros. are short to Grier Bros., and that consequently Mr. Orthwein should not have the appointing of the committee, but Mr. Orthwein says most positively that he is not either long or short, but is in the gap between contracts, and it is believed he is fair-minded enough to appoint a committee that will be perfectly satisfactory, and probably he alone will attend to this important duty. An attempt was made yesterday to bring the matter direct before the Board of Directors, but the Board refused to allow this. It is said that if the consent of all the parties interested, both on the long and short side, can be obtained, another petition making this same demand will be sent to the directors, that they alone hear the case and their decision be final. It is thought that the united request of all the parties could hardly be refused. Mr. Grier says that he has been advised by a couple of lawyers that if he brought suit against the defaulters in a court of law, that he would be sure to beat them on one point of law. All he would have to do would be to produce the receipted bills for corn he bought of the shorts at 68 cents on the last day of November. This would be evidence enough to the court that the corn was worth that much money, especially as the shorts thought enough that way to sell all they held at that price. As it is understood the shorts will bring a lawyer in to conduct their case, it is claimed that the matter might just as well be brought before the courts at once. The case, however, will go through a regular arbitration. The following call for a committee was made this morning:

Geo. H. Morgan, Secretary:

The undersigned having a dispute and disagreement on a certain contract for corn for November delivery, hereby call upon the committee on contracts for future delivery to settle and adjust the difference between us in the matter aforesaid.

GRIER BROS.
BOYD & HULL.

OF INTEREST TO BUCKET SHOPS.

The bucket shops are said to be in danger, and a wiping out of these institutions, at least so far as grain trading is concerned, is one of the possibilities of the near future. The movement against the bucket shops, is directed by the commission merchant and brokers of the Chicago Board of Trade. These worthies find that their commissions on option trading are not as large as they would wish to see them; at any rate, they would be largely increased, they think, if bucket shop trading was done away with. These institutions depend entirely upon Chicago quotations of grain and provisions on which to do their trading with their customers. They also do business on a commission about one-half that charged by Chicago merchants on their own board. This, together with the fact that parties wishing to speculate can trade in much smaller amounts in a bucket shop than on an open market, has attracted a great many, especially small capitalists, to the "blackboard and ticker" style of speculating. Another cause for complaint from the Chicago commission men is the great number of bucket shops springing up all over the country. In nearly every town of any size at all there is generally one of these shops, dignified by the title of "Open Produce Exchange," or something of that kind; perhaps even with a president, Board of Directors and secretary to give it tone. Naturally the larger markets have their option business cut into largely by these numerous cheaper places. The idea of the Chicago men is to compel the telegraph company to shut down on sending the grain and provision quotations to the bucket shops as they do now. They will make a demand upon the telegraph company to this end, and if they refuse to do as they wish, will then take steps to prevent their obtaining the quotations on the floor.

NOTES.

A special session of the Exchange Board of Directors was held this afternoon to discuss the Registration rules. It is not expected on the floor that the present board will get these rules or the Registration board into shape. Mr. J. D. Houseman, one of the originators of these rules, says there is a procrastination exhibited by the directors in this matter that bodes no good to the scheme, and that probably the whole thing will be pigeon-holed: but that only the Exchange or the State can take hold of registration, and if the Exchange won't, the State will.

The idea appears to have been slowly filtering through a good many of the operators' brains that oats were cheap property at late prices. Some of the first to get on to this idea have been buying all they could, in the way of December and year more particularly. There is probably a considerable shortage out for the balance of this year, and when the shorts looked at the stock this morning and saw it was only 28,000 bushels; looked back at receipts and saw how small they have been; looked out at the rain and thought of country roads, and then saw a general uprising at the early call by eager buyers, then they thought they had looked over the field enough and they "riz right up on their pastern j'ints and shouted 'corner!'"

EAST ST. LOUIS.

The Mysterious Shooting Fracas in a Saloon Last Night.

Shortly after midnight last night two young men named Fred. Smith and Harry Blanchard, both of St. Louis, entered a saloon near the Relay Depot, in East St. Louis, and proceeded to raise a quarrel with some railroad men. Both were partially intoxicated and apparently spoiling for a fight. Smith insisted that some of the men should play pool with him and his companions, and what happened after is a mystery to him. The bar-keeper gives the following version: "The two men entered the saloon about midnight and after drinking beer approached the pool table and demanded I should select a partner and play them pool. I refused, but one of them showed a revolver and insisted—then I consented. One of the young men sitting in the saloon approached the strangers and struck one of them in the face. A general row ensued in which we all took part, the strangers and one of our men using revolvers. I caught one of their revolvers and turned it aside just in time to prevent a murder. A man named Geegan was shot through the breast and was carried away, but I cannot tell where. The two men were knocked down and kicked till unconscious, when the boys all left. The story about being robbed is a lie. One of the men managed to escape shortly after the row was over, and went to St. Louis. The other was rolled out into the street, still unconscious, but I can never tell what happened to him." The proprietor of the saloon was not in the vicinity when the row occurred and knew only what was published. A search in all the boarding-houses failed to unearth either of the murdered men, although the barkeeper was positive the East St. Louis man was concealed in one of them and is not expected to survive his wounds. It is also asserted, on good authority, that the police, who appear so ignorant of the facts of the case, were called shortly after the row occurred, and know more than they wish to tell. The physician attending Geegan was not in his office this morning, having been called to visit a patient outside the city.

FAMOUS.

AN OPEN LETTER!

SOMETHING ABOUT THE "NIGGER IN THE WOOD-PILE."

It has become a notorious fact that when the representative of an Eastern house comes to St. Louis to sell goods, the first question a competing house asks him is: "Do you sell the Famous?" If the drummer has the candor to confess that such is the case, it generally settles his business as far as that house is concerned, and he wends his way to the point he originally intended to go; he brings himself and sample trunk to headquarters, Fifth and Morgan. Now, in homely but expressive language, there must be a "nigger in the wood-pile." It seems the outlet is inexhaustible, for no man ever came West with goods in such large quantities that he couldn't sell them to Famous for SPOT CASH if the price was right.

We have been offering SEASONABLE GOODS lately at such ruinous figures, in comparison to the prices asked by competing houses in our line that somebody's corns seem to suffer. Evidences of this are apparent on all sides, since the spirit of imitation seems to have seized them, even in advertising. Prosperity claims many followers, and our success in business, through fair and liberal dealing with the public, has been so great that wherever our letters patent fail to protect us they claim the name of "Famous."

Now, to give the public an idea of what we mean when we say "HEADQUARTERS," we will tell you that to handle the enormous volume of CLOTHING, SHOES, HATS and FURNISHINGS we sell this year necessitates the employment of more men than are used by any six or eight houses in our line in St. Louis put together, THE GRAND TOTAL OF EMPLOYES USED IN OUR ESTABLISHMENT BEING ONE HUNDRED AND NINETY-FIVE, AND THE WEEKLY PAY-ROLL AGGREGATING $2,700. Another thing we will say to the public: The FAMOUS is composed of home material to the manner bred and born, and "we have come to stay." Our interests are identical with the prosperity of St. Louis. The people have been generous enough to give us a HEARTY FINANCIAL INDORSEMENT, and every dollar of our capital is invested in the Future Great. With us it is the enormous volume of business that makes the profit. We sell low for cash, and predicate the value of an article on its TRUE WORTH, not on what it MAY BRING if you MARK IT HIGH ENOUGH. We sell goods enough at Famous to afford to DIVIDE PROFITS with the purchaser, and as we are a St. Louis institution, we propose to keep on in the same old way that has induced our business to grow in six years from $60,000 to over $1,250,000 per annum.

We will say to the public, in conclusion: If you are anxious to know what our BIG DEAL is for this week, read the advertisement of any house in St. Louis in our line, take off a liberal percentage from the prices quoted, and you will then know what we can do for you ANY TIME at FAMOUS.

We give the young people due notice that SANTA CLAUS in the flesh, the original old man himself, fresh from the frozen regions of the Arctic seas, will shortly appear at Famous for the holiday season. Look out for his manifesto in next Sunday's papers.

A VEXED QUESTION.

Curious Discussion About the Portraits of Columbus.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, December 5.—The authenticity of the various portraits of Columbus was discussed last evening before the American Geographical Society by Chief Justice Daly and Mr. Nestor Ponce de Leon. The former said that it was curious there should be so much uncertainty in regard to one of the most distinguished men that ever lived. The date of Columbus' birth was not settled and his birthplace, claimed by twenty-three localities, had been a mooted question for over 200 years. He was one of the few great men of whom no authentic portrait is known to exist, although, as in Shakspeare's case, a great many portraits have been made, according to the fancy of the designer. A description of Columbus by his son Fernando, says his eyes were of a bluish hue, his nose aquiline, his hair was fair, and at 30 turned white. Oviedo, who knew Columbus personally, in a description published in 1525 says he was rather above medium size, and reddish hair. He spoke gently and was a learned Latin scholar and a great cosmographer. Judge Daly ranked in turn a number of portraits displayed on the platform in their claim for authenticity. He gave preference to the original of the engraving of Paul Jovia's works, the original of the engraving published by Capriola, the picture in the Bibliographical manual of Madrid and the original of the picture in the Naval Museum of Madrid, of which the painting shown last night was a copy. Judge Daly added that there was a portrait of Columbus in Albany which was highly prized here, but nowhere else, as it did not bear the slightest resemblance to the great discoverer.

OF POWERFUL FRAME

MR. PONCE DE LEON,

who was introduced as a lineal descendent of the Ponce de Leon who discovered Florida, followed with a paper in which he classified 200 pictures of Columbus which he had examined as thirty types. Of these there were pictures from life, pictures and statues by artists in accordance with published descriptions of him, and fancy pictures of statues. Mr. Ponce de Leon selected the same portraits as those chosen by Judge Daly's as presenting most faithfully the features of Columbus.

St. Louis Capital in Tennessee.

The stockholders of the South Tredegar Iron and Nail Company met last week at Nashville, and reelected H. L. Fox, of St. Louis, president of the corporation. The capital stock of the company was increased to $200,000. The output of the mill is now about 70,000 pounds of nails and spikes per day. The plant is to be very largely increased, and in 1883, the mill will begin the manufacture of light rails, fish-plates and bar iron.

FOR THE FATHERLESS.

The Baptist Fair On Behalf of Their Unsectarian Asylum.

A Brilliant Affair Which Opens at the Pickwick Next Thursday.

The orphans' fair, bazaar and festival, to be held next Thursday evening and Friday afternoon and evening at the Pickwick, is given by the ladies of all the Baptist Churches of St. Louis. Its object is to start a fund for the founding of an Orphans' Home. There is in this city no Protestant Orphans' Home where children of both sexes can be sent, the nearest being at Webster, which is twelve miles distant. The Methodists have one which is strictly denominational, and also a Girls' Industrial Home, which is a most worthy object of charity, and upon the Board of which are representatives of all Protestant denominations. While this new project is called the Baptist Orphans' Home it is sectarian only in the sense that the Baptists propose to found and maintain it. It will receive children of all religious faiths or of no religious faith, so that it will be really a public institution worthy of confidence and support. Before applying to the public for subscriptions the Baptist ladies felt that they ought to make an effort to raise a fund by their own industry and genius, and this Christmas festival is the result. There will be at the Fair general tables, upon which will be displayed the results of woman's skill in needlework, painting and other forms of art, every discription of plain sewing in all useful articles for both sexes and for domestic uses. Then the young ladies of the Second Baptist Church have a special booth tastefully decorated and presided over by the most charming and beautiful among them. There will be displayed the results of their handiwork wrought during the late summer and autumn months; also some very beautiful objects of art, among them a placque painted by Mrs. S. M. Bowman, the study on which is a bird protecting her nest from a large bumble-bee that is evidently intent on battle, with side studies in delicate work, the whole handsomely framed and mounted. This has been pronounced by some of the best connoisseurs in the city as the finest work of its class ever seen in St. Louis. Then there is a crazy or Japanese quilt composed of squares of velvet, satin and silk in their various forms, richly ornamented with etchings and handsomely embroidered, the whole surrounded by a deep border of quilted satin, the edges of which are ornamented with heavy silk cord. Twenty young ladies have worked upon this beautiful piece of needlework, which is a marvel of art. Here, also, will be found articles especially desirable as Christmas presents for gentlemen—brush-broom cases, slipper cases, toilet sets, etc.

In the center of the hall will be found a full-rigged ship, manned by young people of the Third Church in sailor costume, and filled with the choicest freight of sweetmeats and bon-bons. Connected with this will be novel devices intended as surprises. Opposite will be seen a beautiful pagoda, where the Queen of Flowers will dispense her gifts, assisted by a bevy of young ladies, representing various flowers, in queer costumes. In another part of the hall will be a Shaker booth, where a whole sisterhood of Shakers, in primitive attire, will tempt the appetite with home-made jellies, preserves, mine-meat and other dainties, so that many who have failed to lay in a supply can here remedy the omission by choosing from the home-made articles of the best families.

The children will have a corner all to themselves where "the old woman who lived in a shoe" will hold carnival. Dolls of every age, sex and size, dolls' clothing and furniture of all descriptions will be here disposed of. Here, too, will be exhibited things which have been made by the children in the different bands called "Willing Workers," and a large assortment of articles suitable for Chrismas presents for the little ones. Many other articles of interest to children and calculated to make them enjoy the fair are here displayed.

A large refreshment room will be fitted up with all conveniences for serving the delicacies of the latest styles, and every evening, from 6 o'clock on, a regular, old-fashioned New England supper of pork and beans, brown bread, Indian pudding, etc., will be served. Good music has been provided and all that the decorator's art can accomplish has been done to transfer the place into a fairy scene. Everything that can be found useful or ornamental in bazaars or festivals will be on exhibition, but something ordinarily found in the modern fair will be excluded. There will be no raffling, no importuning of people to buy things, no company of young ladies going about the hall soliciting shares in numerous articles. Every one will be free to come and go, to buy or not to buy, as he may choose. The object of each evening will be to furnish an agreeable entertainment for all who come, and to make the place the center of good fellowship. Other attractions which have been furnished are of such a nature that they cannot be described without destroying their effect, so that the festival needs to be seen and enjoyed in order to appreciate properly its beauty and unique character. The admission fee is put very low—twenty-five cents for adults and ten cents for children—and the entertainment alone will be worth the money, whether the visitor buys anything or not. Purchasers will find that articles have been marked at prices greatly below their real value, so that every one will be sure to get full value for their money. The managers of the fair have worked hard and done everything in their power to present the public with a model Christmas festival, and they now invite the public to come, see, enjoy and judge for themselves.

THE LAW LIBRARY.

Important Amendments Submitted to a Special Meeting.

The Law Library Association, with a membership of 472, was unable to present more than forty on the attendance-roll of the annual meeting held last evening. It was therefore decided to meet again two weeks hence for the purpose of voting upon two important amendments. During the past year great changes have been effected in the library, increased space, light and ventilation being furnished. These alterations were much needed and vote of last evening retaining the managing board sustained the action of that body. It is proposed to increase the annual dues from $10 to $15, and the entrance fee $20 to $30. The revenue is spent chiefly in the purchase of books, for the association pays no rent for the library. It is used, however, by the Judges of the courts and all the public officers, serving the purpose of a city library of legal volumes. The following amendments will be submitted at the special meeting two weeks hence:

"Neither the sum required to be paid on the admission to membership nor the regular semi-annual assessments levied on the members for the objects of the association shall be increased or diminished unless two-thirds of the members present shall concur."

"Neither the sum required to be paid on the admission to membership nor the regular semi-annual assessments levied on the members for the objects of the association shall be increased or diminished unless two-thirds of all the members present at a meeting of not less than forty-eight members of the association shall concur."

It is scarcely necessary to state that the membership of the Law Library is composed of the best elements of the legal profession. There are seventeen honorary members who have the use of the library for life.

The Public School Library Lecture.

A large audience, filling the hall beyond its seating capacity, assembled in the reading-room of the Public School Library to hear Prof. Snow's lecture on "Three Flemish Towns." The stereopticon illustrations and accompanying descriptions conveyed a very good idea of Bruges, Ghent and Antwerp of the present day; and many historical allusions served to recall the past of those famous cities. The lecture next Monday will be by Principal Morgan, of the High School, on "Our Indebtedness to the Commonalty." Free tickets to the lecture may be obtained at the library. The course will last through the winter, a lecture being given every Monday evening. The lecture began last night promptly at 8 o'clock; and it is the intention to make punctuality the rule.

AT THE ROCKIES.

A Woman's Impressions of Pretty, Altitudinous Denver.

A Railway Trip to the West and Some Pleasant Musings.

Correspondence of the Post-Dispatch.

DENVER, COL., December 3.—So much has been written in praise and condemnation of this Western land that editors have come to think the subject exhausted. But there are those who have never lived in this radiant air, and felt somewhere—one don't know just where to locate the spot—the lightness and cheerfulness born of this altitude. This is one of the of Colorado, and how different from a gloomy day in the Mississippi Valley! I was awakened this morning, after sunrise, by the whistling of the winds through my windows and an ominous fluttering of awnings outside, but to my eyes there opened a vista of unpainted beauty. In the east, behind dark gray clouds, the sun hid his sullen face, and far over the zenith lay fold on fold of snow-lined, crinkled motionless heaps of vapor, which toward the west, clear cut as with a sword, met the loveliest shades of opal eye ever saw. First a line of azure blue, then a hint of yellow, too faint to be more than a vision, then delicate green waves that surged softly into the gray and white of the mountain caps, till down on the rugged sides of the foothills earth and snow and sky blended in one somber brown. But away off to the north, through chimneys and roofs, some peak caught the gleam of the hiding sun and glowed like the heart of the flame in which Lizzie Hexham saw the honors to come to her good-for-nothing Charlie. Between the skies and my window floated that impalpable, intoxicating je ne sais quois, which makes one feel like a jumpingjack and forbids all blues. Down in the cosiest hotel breakfast-room imaginable, I ask an old resident, in fact the oldest inhabitant, and he gravely informs me, "It is the altitude." Ciel! I've been told that in answer to every question I ask, and I begin to doubt the efficacy of the altitude. To my left at the table sat a sparkling, ricochet quartette, from whom came a chance word, sentence, conversation—what you will—which opened my eyes to the altitude.

SIX CHAMPAGNE COCKTAILS, and one this morning, before she could sing "encores." I don't know what it is, the cocktail, the altitude, or the tout ensemble, but some things conspire to make this enchanted ground. It is very true that this brilliant champagne-cocktailed, savoir-fair four never once spoke of the "glory of the heavens," a poor theme, but so full of sensuous, animate nature were they that I accepted the altitude. As I write, with the day far advanced, over in the west the foot-hills stand out firmly in the lemon sky, and up in the north the lines are faint gray and topaz, while the crust of the mountain is shrouded in gloom—and yet there is not that lonely, desolate, little, withered-apple feeling that one has down where here is no altitude to speak of. What these clouds are to give us no one knows. Flying before the sun their shows may cover the far-off peaks and leave us to dust and disappointments. Railroads go get up the most fantastic tricks in the shape of folders, guide-books, or by whatever technical terms their idiosyncrasies are known, that ever the inventive mind of man from pure cussedness conceived. Not many moons ago my wayward steps led me to the "westering sun" and over the O. & M. to St. Louis, my first halt on my march. The red-backed A B C arrangement some officials gave me was plain enough as far as the O. & M. was concerned. I knew every tie over the dear old road, and a jolt more or less informed me only that there was a new rail laid or a car-load of ballast just emptied. I knew that just before we got to Vincennes Billy Pleasants, the porter of our parlor car, would appear to know whether I wanted coffee or dinner and I knew I would say dinner, for they give you twenty minutes and a "powerful good feed" at Vincennes. I knew my brains and trunks were safe on the Ohio and Mississippi, but such a labyrinth of hieroglyphics as that folder led me into! To escape, I took the Missouri Pacific, which, barring the fact that they have one conductor who knows only enough to clumsily flirt with flip girls, and stops at Jefferson City for a dinner which should be labeled is a charming, obliging railroad, for it takes you for miles and miles along the banks of a spread-out, marshy, sandy, full-of-bogs, desolate stream called the Missouri and its officials gravely inform you, "it is a greater stream than the Ohio." The Ohio is a disgusting rivulet sometimes, but she never goes meandering round a lot of sand dunes and gaunt sycamores as does the Missouri. So full of surprises, too! Rushing along we saw a flat waste land with a dull, leaden stream forcing its way through drift and sycamore, and lo! there looms a dock and the saucy "Aggie," a brisk little steamboat, puffing impatiently at her ropes. Anon a bridge, slender, strong and trusty as a woman's friendship, slips by under the wheels, and that quaint little metropolis of cliff and valley, is a qui. What can a traveler say of this odd, built-most-anywhere, crow's-nest town? I saw it under the gas-light and it looked as if the Titans were working. I looked upon it in the morning and I saw the brawn and brain of our own laborers. What was a ruin in the night was brick and scantling and joist in the clear day, and so, out of this wee city, we steamed over the plains. It is not so very, very many years agone, for I am not so very, very old, when was the "last town." In barrack, in garrison, in camp, will I ever forget this; "Salina is the last town you will strike before you get to Santa Fe?" We struck it! I forget what it was, because it failed to bring to our "outfit" just what we wanted. Beyond we found Solomon, which yielded us "ginger beers" and as vile whisky as ever went down soldier throat. That is long, long ago, and these gentle ladies and gallant gentlemen of Salina—the now Salina—were babies in downy cradles then. Over these plains where buffaloes, Cheyennes, Kiowas and coyotes roved, where for many long days our tired ears heard "Cook's call," "strike tents," and "March;" where for many star-lit mornings our eyes had seen nothing but sage brush, grease wood tents and raw recruits, and our senses been stupefied by the "uncertain glimpses of the dawn" as we slipped half dressed in our ambulances, now nestle pretty villages, and the inevitable windmill still goes on. To a great many people a Pullman car, with its many conveniences, is not the appreciable thing it should be, but to one who has "staged across" it means something. No conductor of any coach can be more gentle, more courteous, more watchful than those who, over the old Sante Fe trail, once guarded the "wife of an officer," nor engineer prouder of his throttles and valve than the driver who long years ago drove with me on the box from

"R. O. H.,"

Railroads and civilization have robbed the Raton of its glory, but many an old soldier will call up the Raton Pass. A wheezy engine burrows through a tunnel over which the watch-fires of the old Fifth Infantry gleamed, and adown the cañons and steppes of the mountain; no longer is heard the shrill call of old Dick's herders. Maybe he is dead, and the low-browed, dark-eyed, swift-footed senoritas who served our meals may be lying with their pretty toes upturned to the daisies. If he is gone God rest his soul; if they are gone may the flowers bloom brightest above them, for no sweeter bread and honey have I tasted than that at Old Dick Houghton's ranch on the top of the Raton Pass.

CHICAGO TRAITSE.

A Mighty Piggery Depicted by George Alfred Townsend.

Cor. Cincinnati Enquirer.

Chicago is less agreeable as a place to loiter in than Cincinnati, but it has so many people, such almost furious growth, such unscrupulousness, yet such wild boar energy, that it seems a hundred years less civilized than Cincinnati, but a hundred years ahead of any physical competitor in the West. It is, perhaps, the only society in the world that had no original modesty. Honesty was an afterthought to these people, like Franklin's kind of honesty that he defended on the score of its being good policy. Yet here dwell side by side, almost in the same bosom, generous impulses and a sordid life, the hog bound to get his tusks into the money-trough, and the little pig who can tie an affectionate memorandum in his tail. Domestic life and even social aspirations sprout to some extent in this mighty piggery, where the blood of cattle smokes mutely to heaven, and no man inquires where is the cemetery; where food and drink are gambled in, and war to the death is the daily riot on 'Change, and the battle of avarice extends to the corporations, so that they have a war twice a year and massacre each other's property. All this turpitude and gluttony are carried on by nearly 600,000 people, who do not know their own origin, who drifted upon this dead level of prairie like the animals after the deluge, and never see a prospect to raise their eyes and souls from the earth they have pulled up to their feet. Sympathies exist here like garden-seed sown in a muck, which can not survive the noise, and scalping is regarded as the Spartans did their sickly babes they dipped in ice-water not fit to live. When this place was a fort and the Indians captured it, the garrison surrendered and the garrison children were put into one wagon to be transported. Suddenly an Indian boy sprang into that wagon and began to tomahawk and scalp all the white children there. Something of the spirit of the subsequent Chicagoan was in his relentless arm; for nobody here is considered to have any right to be helpless. They corner bread and meat on mankind, and no wonder this is the only American city where there is a distinctly Socialistic army, running its ticket at elections. Where the Tartar makes the laws the Nihilist will defy them.

"Suckers," "Badgers" and "Pukes."

Gath in Cincinnati Enquirer.

The word "sucker," as applied to Illinois people, is said to be derived from a Missouri man at Galena, where the miners transiently lived. He said: "Boys, where are you going?" They replied, "Home." "Well," said he, "you put me in mind of suckers: up in the spring to spawn, and all return in the fall." The Wisconsin men, who stayed over at the lead mines all winter, were generally called badgers. The Missourians soon swarmed to the lead mines as if they had been vomited out of the ground, and the Illinois people called them pukes, a word which stuck for many years. Stephen A. Douglas thought the word sucker was derived from the custom of drinking mint juleps through a straw. Douglas said that when the Virginians stormed Kaskaskia they saw the French all sitting around tables sucking their juleps, and shouted, as they rushed, "Surrender, you suckers."

A Famous Pioneer Dies Poor.

From the Oregonian.

Along in the early '40's, George Gay, who lately died near Wheatland, was the wealthiest man in Oregon, outside of the Hudson bay company, his herds of cattle and horses roaming over what is now the southern parts of Yamhill and the northern parts of Polk counties. In 1843-44 he built the first brick house in Oregon. He entertained Commodore Wilkes and his officers, and his house was a general resort for travelers and emigrants. He dispensed a rude but unbounded hospitality, to which all comers were welcome. I have known him to slaughter a bullock for the breakfasts of his guests, the remnants of which were eaten for supper. Gay was kind and gentle in his deportment, but always retained a dash of rollicking bonhomie which more or less pertains to the sailor, the trapper and the mountaineer. His property gradually slipped from his hands; the wily arts and tricks of civilization were too much for his unsophisticated nature, and, like nearly all of the generous and hospitable old pioneers, he died poor.

FRENCH NOBILITY.

A Tilt Against the Bearers of Bogus Titles.

From the London News.

French society is every bit as bad as English in its weakness for a Lord. The only difference is that while British snobbism worships at a distance, French, with the national passion for equality, aims at leveling itself to the thing adored. The Frenchman often takes a title to himself, as he takes a ribbon, because he can not bear to be without such a common thing. Viscounts in the average salon lie thick as leaves in the fall. So the salons never had a ruder shock than when an "ancient herald," signing himself "Toison d'Or," announced in the Voltaire that he was out on leave from his sepulchre to study the heraldic composition of the French society of to-day. His preface was alarming. To judge by appearances, he said, one might think that the Revolution had destroyed nothing, and, on the contrary, that its chief business had been to make our aristocracy increase and multiply. He undertook to show that the canker of false pretense in titles had spread through all classes, and that, instead of fine-sounding names, hardly one in twenty of the diplomatic agents of the Republic belonged to an old French house. Every French diplomatist seems to think that he must have a title to keep in countenance among his brother envoys of foreign courts. This, perhaps, would be the sole excuse for M. de Tallenay, Minister Plenipotentiary at Lima, for writing his name M. le Marquis de Tallenay. The truth is, Marquis is merely his surname, and Tallenay is the place to which he belongs. He is plain M. Marquis, of Tallenay, but in no other sense the Marquis of that place. Since then, and it is some months ago, "Toison d'Or" has been writing without pity and without stint. He has every qualification for his task—humor and point, and above all, a knowledge of the subject rare in the France of our day. Hence the growth of a despairing resignation on the part of his victims, who walk about as though looking for a corner into which they may drop their borrowed plumes of nobiliary distinction on the sly. In a second letter to the French Ministers abroad he asked whether Baron de Courcel, the French representative at Berlin, would lose anything in real distinction by presenting himself at that court as plain M. Chodron. The process by which he has become Baron de Courcel, though complex, is easily traced. His father obtained the right to add Courcel to his name Chodron and to write himself M. Chodron-Courcel. Then, in process of time, the Chodron wore away from this appellation; the Courcel only remained. If Courcell, why not De Courcelles, after one of the old historic families of France? So, for a time, the name was actually written in this way. At length it lost the final syllable, but took the Baron as dommages-interests. The smaller fry of diplomacy share in this castigation with the great ones. "Toison d'Or" has no sooner released a Minister from his powerful grasp than he plucks up a little attaché to hold him up to the derision of all the world. "Take M. de Saint-Genys, at St. Petersburg, who assumes the title of Viscount. By what right? In virtue of what decree? Of what order? Of what customs? Of what laws? I know of none at all?"

When there is nothing more left to destroy in Paris this most terrible of all iconoclasts takes a turn for refreshment at the spas, where it is a mere holiday with him to analyze the mixed company at the hotels and tables. "Who is the Countess de Barbotan?" he asks. "Where is that bizarre country to be found? Where does the Countess de Christin derive her illustrious title, and Baron de Valri, and Comte de Barste, and Comte de Tonay, and Comtesse de Darrieu, and Baron de Duquesne, and the Comte and Comtesse de Roquet—who be they?" Foreigners at these places are just as bad as the French or worse. Madame la Comtesse Craczewska might pass, but why does she call herself Comtesse de Craczewska? The mark of nobility in Slavonic names is in the termination, and our prefix de finds its equivalent in their last syllable. "Can you imagine a real Polish noble such as Zamoyski calling himself de Zamoyski? It would be just as stupid as an M. de de La Tremouille in French." It is more than half the fault of journals, we are assured: "They must write something, and often they do not know what they are writing about. They have their columns of fashionable announcements, and all is fish that comes to that net. They have just told me, for instance, that M. A. de Quillacq has just arrived at Valenciennes. He has done well, for he has a machine factory in that town, and he must look after his business, but he is a plain M. Quillacq for all the world. The masterpiece of the sublime in this style, however, is in the transformation of the son of the Countess of Caithness into His Excellency le Duc de Bomar." Before "Toison d'Or" had been writing very long in this style there came the usual signs of public discomfort; his table was covered with letters, some abusing him, others containing requests on the part of worthy people that he would "fabricate honest parchments" for them for any sum he liked to name. "I could set up quite a good business in human vanity." But he declines all offers, and pursues the even tenor of his way. Why not? The game is so plentiful that he has but to follow the high-road to have it cross his path.

Had a Better Thing.

From the Detroit Free Press.

It was real funny to see him brace up as he turned the corner, button his threadbare black coat, adjust his hat, shove a pencil over his ear, and try to disguise himself. When he had fixed himself he passed down the street, entered a saloon, and walking straight up to the bar he asked:

"Is your name Blank?"

"I expect it is," was the reply.

"John Blank?"

"Vhell, der poys call me Shon."

"Can I speak to you in private, Mr. Blank?"

"You can shpeak right oudt here. Nopody is aroundt oxcept my poy, und he doan' hear us."

"I guess not. I can shtand oop und hear all you say."

"Well, Mr. Blank, I have been deputized to ask you if you would be a candidate for Mayor next year."

"Me?"

"Yes. You are said to be one of the most popular men in Detroit. You are rich, popular, liberal, and could be elected by a large majority."

The saloonist looked at him for a long minute and then asked:

"Are you dry?"

"Never was so dry in my life."

With a perfectly placid countenance Mr. Blank filled a "schooner" with water, placed it on the bar, and looked the man square in the eye as he said:

"I vhas a tousand times obleeged to der poys, but I can't occept dot office."

"You can't? Don't you want to be Mayor of Detroit?"

"No, my friendt. I haf sometings better ash dot. I vash going to run for Governor next time! Come in real often and drink to my success."

STARS TRAVELING IN CARS.

The Private Coaches Used by Three Prominent Actresses.

From the Philadelphia Record.

Three of the principal female theatrical stars of the country will travel this season in private cars especially engaged for them. These include Mme. Modjeska, Mme. Nilsson and Mrs. Langtry. The star of to-day goes about in great style, and it takes a good big bank account to back up her whims and make her feel comfortable. Modjeska is the first to take the road. She came here in a magnificently arranged car, the City of Worcester, which is leased every summer to a party of gentlemen residing in the city of that name in the Bay State, and in which they make an annual trip to the plains and Rocky Mountains. This car has been refitted by Mr. Stetson, with whom Mme. Modjesca has the contract "to do" the country. The interior has been refurnished at an expense of not less than $5,000. The Madame insisted upon her private car, and she holds her manager strictly to the letter of his contract. Cars are rather costly affairs and eat into the profits of the engagement. In the first place they cost $50 per day for their use, which sum goes to the Parlor Car Company's treasury, and does not include the hauling of the car about the country, which is equivalent to the fare of eighteen passengers. Sundays count the same as other days. Then there is a porter, a French cook and servants for the Madame, all of whom are under pay during the entire engagement, as well as a manager, who accompanies the star and looks after the financial interests of his employer. At the conclusion of the present engagement at the Chestnut Street Opera House Mme. Modjeska will have spent two entire weeks in this city. Her car has been placed on a siding up at Belmont, while she has been enjoying sumptuous apartments at the Continental Hotel. The car costs just the same whether in use or not, and for the fifteen days the actress spends here Mr. Stetson will pay $750 rental to the Pullman Company. At the conclusion of her engagement the lady starts on a week's tour through the State. This is where the car and its attendant comforts come handy. During that time the country hotels will be shunned, and the Madame will eat and sleep on the rail. When the next large city is reached, and a week's stay is made, the car will be thrown upon a siding to wait for its fair occupant to return. The City of Worcester is the same coach in which Patti made her tour last spring. Of course, for all this heavy outlay there must be an adequate return. Proprietor Fred. Zimmermann, of the Opera-house, says that Modjeska last week brought $9,960 to his nobby amusement hall, What proportion the star gets he is not aware, but he presumes it is not less than thirty-five per cent of the gross receipts. Mr. Stetson, of course, receives a handsome percentage, out of which he pays the company, and Zimmerman & Nixon pocket what is left. The managers all like Modjeska; she is not fretful, and does not demand outrageous things. The lady is a hard worker, and never shirks six nights and a matinée if she is well enough to stand upon the stage.

Next Wednesday Mme. Nilsson will come here in a private car, with French cook attachment, etc. She will give but two performances here. The songster will be quartered at the Hotel Bellevue, in apartments which cost $24 per day, not including meals and attendance. In addition there is provided for her use a handsome turnout—team, footman and driver—the best that the fashionable West End can supply. This will cost about $25 per day, whether it leaves the stable or not.

Following Nilsson comes Mrs. Langtry, who will occupy the same sumptuous apartments as her predecessor, and have the same gaudy team and equipage as the queen of song. It is a very costly business, this moving of female stars about the country; but, if they are a success, the couple of hundred dollars per day expense entailed is but a bagatelle when the profits are taken into consideration.

ALL FOR LOVE.

Why a Missouri Girl Took Poison and Killed Herself.

From the West Plains Journal.

The citizens of Willow Springs and vicinity were thrown into a high state of excitement on the night of the 24th inst. by the announcement that Miss Sarah Young, daughter of William Young, a respectable farmer living about a mile from the Springs, had suddenly died of poison, administered by her own hand, with suicidal intent.

Miss Young, who was about sixteen years of age, and the youngest of the family, was her father's housekeeper, her mother being dead. On Friday afternoon she visited the school taught at Willow Springs by Monroe Lovan, and, after school was dismissed, Mr. Lovan accompanied Miss Sarah a part of the way home. Mr. Young, learning of the circumstance, and for reasons best known by himself, severely scolded his daughter for allowing Lovan to keep company with her.

Miss Sarah took deeply to heart the chiding of her father, and at supper it was noticed that she ate but a few bites of food. After the meal was ended, Sarah went into another rocom, where her father had gone, and complained of "feeling bad all over, as if she was going to die." Soon she was taken with a spasm, but recovering from it, she called for some tallow to eat. Her father then charged her with having taken poison, which she denied; but almost immediately the poor girl went into convulsions, and died within thirty minutes.

Dr. Posey was summoned, but arrived too late to be of service.

The ladies from the neighborhood flocked in to render whatever assistance was necessary, and while preparing the remains for burial, they discovered, tightly clutched in the girl's hand, the following note which she had written:

I got mad because pa would not let me keep company with Monroe Lovan, and took strychnine in coffee to kill me. Bury me with my brown dress on.

Mr. Young was very much affected at the rash act and tragical end of his daughter; but we are not informed as to the reasons prompting him to give the reprimand which impelled Miss Sarah to ruthlessly cut short her life ere it had blossomed into womanhood.

The Spoon-Shaped Bonnet.

From a late Paris Letter.

A new fashion to signalize is that of spoon-shaped bonnets. They do not stand up straight above the head, as did those of a similar form, which were in vogue some fifteen years ago, but the point projects over the wearer's brow. So far they are in dark velvet, with the fronts lined with pale-colored satin.

TENNYSON'S PLAY.

How and Why a London Audience Guyed it to Death.

G. W. Smalley's London Letter.

When Eva asks Edgar to marry her, he replies that marriage is a feeble institution which will pass away with priestcraft into the abyss; that Nature's lesson is the true one, under whose law the birds pair merrily for the season, and part not less merrily when the season is over. The brutality of such a speech from a lover to his mistress brought a storm about his ears. The pit had for some time shown signs of impatience; after this they broke into loud protests. The unhappy Edgar none the less had to proceed with a still more unlucky speech:

Marriage in itself! Well, when the great democratic deluge which is slowly coming upon us and all Europe shall have washed away thrones and churches, ranks, conditions and customs—marriage, one of the most senseless, among the rest—why then the man and the woman, being free to follow their "elective affinities," will each bid the old bond farewell, not with tears, but with smiles, not with mutual recrimination, but with mutual good wishes, with no dread of the world's gossip and no necessity for concealment; and the children!—well, the State will bring up the children.

A shout of derision greeted the last sentence, and it is probable that nothing could have saved the play. Discussions about the influence of heredity upon himself, and quotations from the Republic of Plato, did not help matters. The laughter became infectious and general, and what was worse, it was the pathetic speeches or the speeches meant to be pathetic at which the laugh was most frequent. Every note touched was a false one. When Edgar meets Dora in the second act, he justifies his sudden fancy for her by her resemblance to his old ~~love~~, Eva, and in one of those perilous soliloquies with which the piece is stuffed, advances to the footlights and remarks: "Surely I must have loved Eva more than I knew—poor dead Eva, drowned through me. But to make amends, I will wed Miss Dora if possible."

The house saluted this solemn declaration with shrieks of laughter. New and original beyond dispute is the notion that a lover who ruins one sister in the first act is to make amends by marrying the other in the second. Down to this point the pit, though uproarious enough, had put some sort of curb on its license, out of just respect, let us hope, to the great name and age of Mr. Tennyson. But from this moment the scene became an orgie. Of all means of damning a play, none is so fatal and so pitiless as that which is known as "guying" it. And they guyed Mr. Tennyson's piece through the last two acts with a merciless merriment which was distressing enough to his friends and those who knew that two of his sons were in the house.

The blacker Edgar's villainy grew the more hilarious grew the pit. The more obvious the appeals to the moral or patriotic sentiment, the more direct and deadly were the volleys of deadly mocking cheers or the more marked the still more murderous silence. Some of the most dangerous lines ever put into an actor's mouth fell to Mr. Vizen's lot as Edgar, and were delivered with unflinching distinctness. "In twenty minutes more she might have been mine," provoked a ribald yell. One of the peasant girls says her lover has 'listed as a sodger, to which Dora answers, "Ah, there are no soldiers like the English soldiers"—a bit of claptrap which the house received with dead silence. So they did the remark of Dora to Dobson: "You are an English farmer, not a foreign assassin." When the blind father, sternly turning from his daughter, demands piteously to be led away, the house applauded and replied: "Don't bring him back again." When Dora repeats her good night to her sister it is echoed tumultuously from the front—"Good-night," and then "Good-night," with remarks not necessary to reproduce. To these ebullitions not merely the sentiment but the diction lent itself. Mr. Tennyson is beyond dispute a great master of English, but it has pleased him to strew this piece with sentences so weak in structure and phrase that it is a compliment to speak of them as puerile. So much innocence of the language of everyday life has seldom before been seen outside the nursery.

CAPT. FRANGEL'S DISTRICT.

One Hundred Vagrants Arrested in the Last Six Months.

An examination of the records of the Second District Police Court by a POST-DISPATCH reporter to-day shows that during the past six months over eighty arrests for vagrancy have been made in the Third Police District, commended by Capt. Henry Frangel. The principal number of arrests were made by Detectives Warren and Badger, and in nearly every case a fine of $500 was imposed and the party was either sent to the Work-house or execution was stayed and the vags given time to leave the city. The numerous arrests of vagrants has cleared the Third Police District of one of the most dangerous gangs that ever infested a western city. Too much praise cannot be accorded to the captain and his excellent corps of officers for the good work that has been accomplished in the Third District in the past four months.

An Exciting Morning Adventure.

Officer J. J. Hurley had a lively experience all to himself early Sunday morning. Shortly after 2 a. m. his attention was attracted to the house kept by Nelse Jacobs, a white man, at 718 South Second street. The ground floor is a saloon, and in the third story a negro dance was in progress, which was evidently breaking up in a lively row. As Officer Hurley went in by the front door of the saloon, Jacobs rushed in at the back entrance, pulled his revolver from the drawer and fired at the officer. The ball barely missed him, and Mr. Jacobs was about to shoot again, when Hurley got hold of him and took his pistol away. It was then discovered that Jacobs had a severe cut in the side, presumably inflicted in the fight upstairs. A negro named Henry West was also found who had his arm broken in the same melee. Jacobs and West were taken to the Dispensary and had their wounds dressed. Officer Hurley has sworn out a warrant charging the saloon-keeper with assault to kill.

At midnight, Sam Gibson and Fred. Winkelman, the bar keeper at Stolle's Hall, Fourteenth and Biddle streets, became involved in a difficulty in a saloon, and Gibson struck at Winkelman with a sharp knife, but the blow missed its mark and stuck into the wall behind the bar, and just barely missed Winkelman's neck. Gibson then fled, and Winkelman fired a shot at him, but without effect. No arrest has yet been made, but Gibson is well known in the Third District.

THE GREAT HIATUS.

Congressman J J. O'Neil Wants the Indian Territory Opened.

What a Legislator Saw in a Ten Days' Trip South.

Hon. John J. O'Neil, Congressman-elect of the Eighth Missouri District, has just returned from a flying trip to Mexico and the Southern States, and he is full of information as a tourist and as a man who has traveled from Dan to Beersheba, with his eyes wide open, can be. "It was a very short trip, of course," said he to a POST-DISPATCH reporter, "but short as it was it sufficed to alter my views very considerably upon a great many points. For instance, traveling South I noticed the farms and the evidences of cultivation on both sides of the track as far as the eye could reach. Evidently the land was supporting a happy, prosperous people. As though cut off by a dead wall all of these evidences of civilization stop right at the line of the Indian Territory. There for two hundred miles the cars plunge ahead through the most beautiful region on the American continent, with not a farm nor a dwelling in sight. Here and there over the three hundred miles are little villages, but the land is a waste. But when you emerge into Texas the farms and the cultivation begin as suddenly just at the Indian line as they left off. The proper name for the Indian country would be the Great Hiatus. Just think of it; that Territory has a population of 50,000 Indians. If it was permitted to cultivate those parts of it which the Indians can not possibly use it would to-day be supporting more than a million whites. What I saw convinced me that it would be better for the Indians themselves to have the territory opened up to white settlement, and our own progress absolutely demands the opening. Our people have grown right to the Indian line, and then pressed by the advancing mass of population behind they have leaped over the Territory and began the march of improvement beyond. Certainly I shall favor and support legislation looking to the opening of the country. The Indians are being plundered by the smart half-breeds who are growing enormously wealthy through the restrictions placed on the Territory. For instance at the McAllister Coal Mines I was informed that although nine cents per bushel is paid for the coal at the mine, the Indian miners get half a cent per bushel. This shows how they are plundered. I want to see the Indians, not the designing half-breeds and white renegades, put in possession of all the land they can possibly use, and I want to see the balance of the country opened up."

"You met quite a number of St. Louisans, did you not?"

"Yes, at Laredo I met John H. Maxon and Mr. Knipburger, and we three went on together down into Mexico to Monterey. At the Rosario mines, near Monterey, we met S. Hemenway, formerly of St. Louis, now superintendent of the mines there. At Monterey we joined the Wicks party, and after that travelled together to the intense amazement of our Mexican cousins, who never quite understood what the invasion meant. The one thing that impresses an American in Mexico is the uniform courtesy and politeness of the people who are said, by the way, to have worked very industriously on the railroad when building. Of course it is impossible to tell you all about the interesting places we saw—the Alamo, at San Antonio, where Crockett, Bowie and Travis fell; the Zona Libre with its most singular customs laws, Milmos Mesa—all of these things have to be seen to be appreciated."

WHEN others are suffering, drop a word of kindness and sympathy. If they are suffering from a cold, give them Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup; a few doses of this valuable remedy will afford instant relief, and a twenty-five cent bottle will cure the worst cough.

It is now understood that on the first of the new year the reduction will be made general. The reduction already made amounts to about 2 per cent on the entire pay-roll, and, as that is something over $40,000 a month, the reduction is equivalent to a saving to the company on a year's pay of about $10,000. The employes state that if a general reduction takes place there will be trouble.—The iron rail-mill of the Springfield Rolling Mill started up to-day to complete some work under contract. SPORTING SUNDRIES.

General Gossip, and Current Gossip Among the Various Fraternities.

A wrestling match for $250 a side is being arranged between Pooler, of Cleveland, O., and Duncan Ross, the well-known athlete. The match is to be collar and elbow, best two in three. Ross having issued a general challenge, which has been answered by Pooler.

The correct list of the names and positions of the members of the Baltimore nine for next season is as follows: Kelly, Barnie and Baker, catchers; Fox and Divens, pitchers; Stearns, first base; Larkin, second base; McCormick, third base; Say, short-stop; Clinton, left field; Eggler, center field, and any one of the catchers right field.

Mike Cleary, the Philadelphia boxer, has gone to Chicago. He will issue a challenge to any man in the West, James Elliott preferred. He will also name James Dalton in his challenge.

Bergen, N. Y., claims to have a foot-runner who can run 109 yards in ten seconds. He recently ran 260 yards in a race in 21½ seconds.

Col. Lewis M. Clark, the President of the Louisville Jockey Club, has begun the building of the straight track at Louisville. The course is to be three-quarters of a mile, and all races of this distance and under will be run on it. It is built in such a manner that the heads of the horses will always be turned toward the spectators.

THE BICYCLE.

The large Forepaugh bicycle was taken to the Natatorium Sunday. A number of the members of the M. B. C. mounted it, but the only one who mastered it completely was C. E. Stone, the ex-captain of the club. There were no "headers" taken, the smooth floor of the rink rendering such a feat impossible. It is generally conceded by those who have seen this machine, that a rider mounted upon it could make some extraordinary fast time, on account of the size of the wheel. This idea, however, is erroneous, as experts who have seen the wheel say that it built entirely out of proportion, and all of them claim that an expert rider could not make a mile upon it in less than five minutes.

The members of the Missouri Bicycle Club give an exhibition at the Natatorium, Wednesday week. The programme for the exhibition will comprise fancy riding, a drill, slow racing, etc., and will be announced in detail in due time.

CONFIDENCE!

In appealing to PUBLIC CONFIDENCE, we would lay special emphasis upon the fact that we rely rather upon the SINCERITY of our promises and the QUALITY of our goods than upon "CATCHY" advertising for OUR SUCCESS. What are you to EXPECT from dealers who almost continually prate about their ability to sell goods from 15 to 30 per cent below all others? What you want is to KNOW that when you are buying clothes for yourself or boy, if an article is represented as all wool or fast color, it IS JUST that thing and NOTHING else.

Here is ONE house ALWAYS READY to HONOR its guarantee. Can you do beter than to try how it works?

In our bright, convenient and elegant Boys' Department, on the second floor, may be seen many choice and attractive things that always please the lads as well as mothers.

Remember that we remain open till 7 o'clock during the week and until 10 Saturday.

AMUSEMENTS.

POPE'S.

The eminent tragedian, Signor Tomaso Salvini, appeared last evening at Pope's in the rôle of Othello. The lines were spoken in Italian, as during the engagement of the distinguished foreign actor here two seasons since. It is scarcely necessary to add that the performance was a brilliant triumph of art, a powerful embodiment of the fierce passion with the delicate underlying touches of a softer nature, presenting a strong dramatic picture that only such an artist as Salvini is capable of producing before the footlights. He stands to-day the grandest exponent of tragedy on the legitimate stage. His Othello has been presented to St. Louis play-goers at a previous engagement. It is a finished piece of work, a complete interpretation of the great rôle for which Salvini is admirably adapted. His magnificent presence and splendid voice made the usual marked impression upon the audience, and the superb effort was acknowledged with renewed applause and recalls. Mr. Lewis Morrison creditably filled the rôle of Iago, and Miss Adele Belgrade, who made her dramatic debut here three seasons since, won recognition as Desdemona. Miss Marie Prescott was too unwell to appear last evening, and the part of Emilia was undertaken at short notice by Miss Virginia Buchanan. This evening the Salvini company will present "Rose Michel." To-morrow the great tragedian will be seen in the rôle of the Gladiator. On Friday, by special desire, "The Outlaw" will be presented.

"GATH" AT MEMORIAL HALL.

Geo. Alfred Townsend, the distinguished journalist, known under the nom de plume of "Gath" will lecture this evening at Memorial Hall, Lucas place and Nineteenth street, under the auspices of the Elk Club. His subject is "Thomas, the Doubter." Tickets can be obtained and seats reserved at Balmer & Weber's.

NOTES.

This evening the McCullough Club will present at the Pickwick "Withered Leaves" and "Victims." This is the second performance of the season.

Sol Smith Russell as Tom Dilloway in "Edgewood Folks," drew out a fine audience at the Olympic last evening. He is an especial favorite among St. Louis play-goers.

The German military band of the Eighty-first Prussian regiment gave a concert last night at the new Armory which was well attended. There will be another concert this evening.

The Dime Museum, Fourth and Walnut streets, was well attended yesterday afternoon and evening. It is an excellent exhibition of living curiosities. There are stage performances throughout the day and evening.

"Da Belle Russe" attracted a large audience at the Grand Opera-house last evening. Miss Jeffreys Lewis in the title rôle and Mr. J. Newton Gotthold as Capt. Dudley Brand shared the honors of the performance. The play is an acknowledged success, and it is presented by an excellent company. On Friday evening the ladies present will be given bracelet souvenir programmes.

Charlotte Thompson last evening inaugurated the series of special performances at the People's for the benefit of the poor, repeating her popular rôle of "Jane Eyre." The house was crowded. It should not be forgotten that one-half of the gross proceeds of the performances at the People's this week will be distributed among the sick and destitute by the Provident and St. Vincent de Paul Relief Societies. Tickets can be obtained of the police and from the officers of the leading societies, etc. This evening Miss Thompson will appear as "Miss Multon."

MRS. R. WHITING, St. Louis, Mo., says: "I have used Brown's Iron Bitters in my family and think highly of it."
